

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

the 1970s, the number of people in the population aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 to 14.5 million, and the number aged 75 and over from 3.5 to 5.5 million.

There is a growing awareness of the need to provide services for the elderly, and the Department of Health has set up a committee to study the needs of the elderly population. The committee has identified a number of key areas for research, and has set up a number of working groups to study these areas. One of the key areas is the need for research into the health and social care needs of the elderly population. The working group on this area has identified a number of key research questions, and has set up a number of research projects to study these questions.

PREFACE.

By a reference to the two volumes of sermons "preached at Row," it will easily be seen that the original form and order of the thoughts which compose this volume have been greatly changed. It has been deemed allowable, in bringing together all which could illustrate a particular line of thought, to omit whatever seemed superfluous, in some instances to rearrange the matter, and to make many verbal changes. Dr. Campbell's family desire that this should be explicitly stated, and that it should be distinctly understood, that as there was no opportunity of submitting the work to Dr. Campbell, the compiler alone is responsible for its contents.

About two years ago permission was obtained from Dr. Campbell to publish a volume of selections from his sermons. He never saw the result; the present volume being in course of preparation at the time of his death. He was, however, apprized of the approaching completion of the work, and a title-page was submitted for his approval. In reference to this Dr. Campbell wrote:—"As to a title-page it must be in accordance with the character of the selections you have made, to give to readers some idea of what they are to expect; and I know that the relation of the Gospel to a future Judgment was an element in my teaching to which the difficulty felt in harmonizing 'Grace' and 'Judgment' gave some prominence, yet my remembrance is more of the attraction felt in the Grace seen in itself. But doubtless this character also must belong to what you have found most profitable to your own spirit."

THE GROUND OF RESPONSIBILITY AS TO THE RECEPTION OF DIVINE TRUTH.

MY friends, I would now speak to you of that responsibility under which you come in consequence of hearing the counsel of God, a responsibility under which all come who hear that counsel, a responsibility which arises out of the very nature of the counsel itself.

It is quite clear that the mere manifestation of power, beyond what we have been acquainted with and can explain, is not enough to command our belief of any doctrine. And it is also clear that in the case of the large proportion of those to whom the Word of God has come, it has not come with any such manifestation of power as would vindicate for it a claim to be from God. And, although we may, by the study of past history, be able to prove that the words of God when first spoken were accompanied by a manifestation of divine power, yet it is not in this way that we do or can command the faith of our fellow-creatures.

I come declaring a message from God, and say, "This is the gospel of your salvation," and you reply, "We are not certain that it is from God, we must take time to inquire into the validity of the record which contains your message and try the witnesses who first vouched for its truth;" it is obvious that if you were entitled so to reply, I could not answer, "Nay, but you must at once believe;" and it is also clear that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred it would be impossible for you to follow up the inquiry, and to ascertain the actual weight of the external proofs of our message.

My friends, it is another ground altogether which I take with you. I claim that the message of the Gospel should be received by you, not because the book which contains it was written by men to whom God gave witness by signs and wonders, for this is not the ground of my own great peace in resting, as on a firm rock, on the statements of this book. I claim your faith in that testimony which God has never been without in your own conscience—that testimony concerning sin and holiness, concerning what is due to God and man—the law of which is written on the heart, and which the preached Word does but confirm. It is required of you that you discern, in any Word which professes to be of God, its agreement or disagreement with God's testimony in your conscience; it is required of you, that when God speaks you should believe, because of what He speaks, because His glory is in the truth spoken.

It is needful that you perceive on what you have to rest in the last resort, as to certainty that what you believe is true. Had you ever so many miracles to prove that it comes from God, still, How could you know that God Himself would tell you the truth? Because, you reply, the truth alone is worthy of God. True, therefore you are thrown back upon this, that unless there be within you something which can give response as to what is worthy of God, God Himself cannot demand of you to believe that which is spoken. Let there be the most irresistible evidence that God is the speaker, still, if I am not otherwise taught that God will never do what is inconsistent with His glory, and that His glory is the glory of truth, the proof that God is the speaker is, to me, no proof that the thing spoken is true. Thus we are still thrown back on the record which God has inscribed on our conscience—a record which no man will dare openly and avowedly to gainsay. It is the evidence contained in the fact that the thing spoken is worthy of God, which gives authority in the last resort to the Word, and which leaves the most illiterate without excuse if he does not fall down and worship God as He is set forth in the Gospel. It would be strange indeed if there were no such impress of God on God's truth as to claim for it that it be received as of God, or if the representation of God in the Word made flesh, which the record of the Gospel contains, did not by its own glory distinguish itself from counterfeits.

I desire now to consider with you the truth of the Gospel in reference to the glory of God, and your consequent responsibility as to its reception.

The first great truth which the Gospel teaches us is that God is love. My dear friends, it certainly does not need much proof that to say "God is love" gives a higher conception of God's character, than to say that you do not know whether He loves men or not. Is love a good or a bad thing? When you say of any being that he looks on others with a pure desire to bless them, surely you are praising that being. Now, how do you know that love is good? Just because God has written a law on your hearts distinguishing between good and evil. It is written on your hearts that, whether God is good or not, it is a good thing to love. He who wrote this law on your hearts says, This is My law; it is My own heart that I describe in telling you what you ought to be. When God teaches me that love is good, if He does not also teach me that He is love, He is by the same law teaching me not to love Him. But when He teaches me that love is a good thing, and also says, "I am love," then the law of love is a law to be what God is, and the command to love God is according to the law within me to love what is good.

When, therefore, you are told that God is love, you have no excuse for not receiving it, because you know already that love is good. But you reason in your hearts: "If we ultimately perish, is not that a proof that God does not love us. God is almighty; if He permits us to perish, is it not a proof that He was willing that we should perish." You go into the history of eternity, and think you find there, in the condition of the lost, an apology for dishonouring thoughts of God! But this is to judge of God's feelings in giving us gifts by the use we make of them. God gives such and such gifts as expressions of His love; and when men have squandered and perverted these gifts, and find themselves reaping what they have sown, they say, "If we are in this state God does not love us—God never did love us."

Can you indeed stand to this, and before your Judge assert that we are not to measure God's love by what He has done, but by the consequences of what we have done; and because, rejecting His love, we are wretched, therefore God did not love us at all? My dear friends, however much you may wish it, you cannot soberly believe that ultimate misery will, in any case, be God's fault, and not man's; God has given you a conscience which will testify that if you perish, it is not for lack of love in God.

Again, as to the practical way in which God has testified, in the work of Christ, of the Good and the Evil, see, I pray you, if the glory of God be not in it. The subject of our Lord's humanity—the incarnation of the eternal Word—is not a thing to be looked at from a distance, but a thing you must come near to and look steadily at, if you would truly see the glory of God in it. To say that God condemns what is wrong is a very different thing from seeing that His heart is really wounded because of wrong. It is this you are taught when you see Jesus suffering in our flesh, suffering for our sins, and suffering from our sins,—when you see Jesus agonized, not merely on account of them, but by them. I wish you to see in this work of Christ—viewing His feelings as those of God to man,—how it is fitted to make us know the unknown God—to make us see Him who is invisible, and to make us enter, through the language of a human heart and feeling, into the secrets of the heart of God. There is, in this way of telling all men that God loves them, that which is altogether glorious and worthy of God; and any way of conceiving of Christ's sufferings which would make them other than the reality of love agonized with sin as rebellion against God, has in it no power to prove God's love to us.

The object which God contemplates as the result of the work of Christ is also altogether worthy of Himself. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God!" The Gospel is given in order that, in real substantial character, you may have the mind of God in you; not for the purpose of giving you safety, but for the purpose of making you partakers of a divine nature—that you may come to know good and evil as God knows them—that you may be capable of seeing, as from your own knowledge, that God is good, holy, and righteous. Oh, do not say that you are not to hope for a capacity of understanding love,—that the deep things of God's character are to be unenjoyed by you; and let not your having been sunk to the lowest depths of sin make you deny yourselves to be the objects of a desire in God to raise you up to dwell in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Understand that there is even more glory to God in bringing holiness out of sin, than in bringing holiness out of nothing. Surely if God is glorified in all holiness, holiness in those who have been washed in the blood of Christ is that most to the glory of God.

Thus it is evident, that in setting before you the sonship which God has given us in Christ, I am setting before you a condition of the creature which is altogether to the glory of the Creator. Therefore do not think it is giving credit to men to say that God has purified them, sanctified them, glorified them; but understand that I am describing the mighty and all-glorious work of God Himself. And while I tell you that you are the materials on which He desires to work,—that you are to work out your own salvation with fear and trembling,—I beseech you to understand that it is God who is to work in you. Oh, let not a false humility persuade you that these are gifts too good for us to receive—that we may be content with something less! Oh, my dear friends! when we think how little we know of God,—how broken a confession of the Cross of Christ we make, and what an unconstrained confession of us Christ is yet to make, we may well be laid low in the dust. But it is well for us to know that He will indeed confess us, and manifest that we are His, on the day of

His appearing, that so we may freely, unconstrainedly—not counting our lives dear unto ourselves—confess Him in the dark day. The trial of faith is exceeding precious,—much more precious than that of gold tried in the fire ;—the trial of the power of faith in the name of God to keep us in the midst of darkness.

It is God's name which is at stake. Oh be jealous, be very jealous for it. You are testifying that God is your portion. Oh be as those who have a portion. You are testifying that He is light to you in darkness, let it be seen that you dwell in light, and walk “as children of the light and of the day.” You are testifying that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin, be then cleansed, purged, purified. You are not merely to bear testimony to what God is in Himself, but you are to be yourselves living witnesses that He is able to bring a clean thing out of an unclean.

I beseech you to think what a desolate universe it would be if these things were not true. But they are true, they are the faithful sayings of God. God has made this provision for you, and expects this glory from you. Oh meet the heart of your God, repent and give God glory. Let Him see in you the beauty of holiness, and let Him train you up as sons and daughters to His praise. Count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge that God has given you in Christ Jesus the adoption of sons. I speak to you all; to the deaf that they may hear, to the blind that they may see, to the hardened in sin that they may understand. We demand on the part of God that you yield the obedience of faith to God; for we know that what we speak to you is not a matter of opinion on which men may safely differ, but that it is that knowledge for lack of which men perish.

THE MIND OF CHRIST.

THE mind of Christ is the mind which is to be in us. The wish to secure our own safety therefore cannot rightly be made the ultimate motive of our actions; for this could not have been the motive of Christ's actions. How much are the distinctions between good and evil confounded, the moment that the holiness and other features of Christ's character are things which a man desires to find in himself, merely in order that he may be able to feel that he is safe. We are turning things upside down when we make the assurance of our personal safety the thing we are to struggle after, and make holiness, justice, goodness and truth, mere stepping-stones to this safety.

What was the mind which was in Christ ?

Christ did not act from any lower motive than perfect delight in God. He declared that it was His meat and drink to do His Father's will. He came forth to reveal—to glorify God; and He testified His perfect delight in God by His perfect willingness to go through all that was needful to this end; and thus He loved the Lord His God with all His heart and soul and mind and strength.

There are two commandments, a first and a second—the second being like the first, and the connection between them being this, that if any man do really love his God as the first requires, then he will be in a condition to love his neighbour as the second requires. That is, if any man hath found his delight in God, he is delivered from selfishness. He desires, in reference to himself, that God may be glorified in him—in reference to his neighbour, that God may be glorified in his neighbour; so his desire for his neighbour is one with his desire for himself.

Christ fulfilled the law, according to the spirit here described ; His desire was that God should be "glorified in Him ;" and it was in reference to this He was willing to die ; His desire was that God should be glorified in all men, and it was in reference to this that He died for all men. The nature of that will in the Father to which Christ conformed, and by so doing, expressed His love to the Father, and the nature of that love to man which in desiring that God should be glorified Christ cherished, is what is expressed to us in the work of Christ.

Christ, in becoming "a curse" for us, recognised the rectitude of the "curse" that was upon us ; and testified that sin is righteously charged upon man, and cannot be referred to the circumstances in which God has placed man. He testifies that it is an excellent thing in God to punish sin. If Christ had not seen this to be so, it would not have been part of Christ's love to the Father to make His soul a sacrifice for sin ; but by doing this, He made it evident that He recognised the rectitude of the curse from which, as our Head, He came to deliver us.

Love to man, as a sinner, can never justly be a flattering love; accordingly, Christ's love to man is that above all other things which condemns man most. In the highest expression of that love, He put to His seal to the righteousness of the condemnation which was upon all men. By this we are taught what the character of that love was—that it was a desire for our good, which wrought in Him independent of our character and notwithstanding His full knowledge of our demerit; a desire for our good so strong as to cause Him to lay down His life for us. This is our Lord's exposition and illustration of the demand of the law to love our neighbour as ourselves.

Let no person then conceive that the standard set before him is too high, when it is said, Love God as Christ loved God and love your fellow-men as Christ loved men—let the same mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus. If this is the requirement of the apostle, speaking by the Holy Ghost, we must believe that God had previously made provision for our obeying the command. What, then, is the provision He has made? Are our circumstances such that this love to God and man can reasonably be expected from us? This is the provision, that Christ, whose mind we are required to have, is God's unspeakable gift TO US. But the great point I wish to fix upon you is, that personally you cannot have the mind of Christ, unless you see this mind manifested in a work which has placed you on a footing from which you can look in peace on God's condemnation of sin. So long as you have the great question of your own safety still undecided, and do not know that which gives perfect peace in the presence of God and in the prospect of death, there will be a secret selfish reference in all your desires to have in yourself the fulfilment of God's will. Observe, what is required is that your love to God should be a pure delight in what God is, and that your love to your neighbours should flow out of, and be one with your love to God, even a sympathy in God's own love to them, a desire that God may be glorified in them, that God's love may be fulfilled in them. Such love to God and man you cannot have whilst the possession of it is desired, if desired at all, as the ground, or at least as the sign of your acceptance with God. If my motive in desiring love is that I may have peace, then the real desire of my heart is this peace, and in this way love can never come. In point of fact, you cannot love God or your neighbour for the sake of peace; and so the evil is not only that your ultimate end is a selfish one, but the steps are such as you cannot take; the thing is impossible. You cannot love from hope of reward or from fear of punishment. You are dishonouring that glorious attribute of love in God, when you desire to possess love only in order to make sure of His favour; and, moreover, while seeking after it in this way and desiring it for this end, you will never obtain it, and cannot have one particle of the mind which was in Christ; you are merely carrying your selfishness into the concerns of another world—acting for eternity in the same spirit in which you have acted for time. I do not say that it is wrong to desire happiness, or to wish to escape from suffering, but I say that God has called you in Christ to a higher thing, viz., to act upon the motives upon which He Himself acts. There is no sin in acting from the hope of reward, but neither is there any holiness. God has provided some better thing for you, and it is sinful in you not to partake of that better thing. It is sinful in you to refuse to be operated upon by any higher motives than those which actuate the lower animals, viz., the fear of pain or hope of pleasure, when you might be actual sharers in God's own holiness and love and peace and blessedness. The intention of God in giving His Son to you, as a Saviour, was that this should be accomplished in you. This purpose has not been accomplished in you who are not dwelling in the light of that love which would transform you into the likeness of Christ. You are indeed as if Christ had never been given; you are as far from enjoying the love of God as if there had been no love flowing through Jesus Christ to you—and you are inexcusably in this evil state. If Christ had not put away sin, if He had not delivered you from the curse of the Law, if He had not the Holy Spirit for you—then you might be judged by the law but the Gospel never could be a condemnation to you, for you could not have been judged on the principle that God had given you eternal life in His Son, and that you had loved darkness rather than light. Since Christ has been given, God's judgment of man turns upon the use he makes of the provision for him in Christ; he will be judged according to his deeds in the body, as those deeds show the results of the Gospel on each man's moral state, but the judgment will be in reference to the gift of God in Christ, and not to the requirements of the law.

God will never confound the distinction between good and evil—a distinction which is eternal and immutable. We are to be judged according to our works. If by works, as under the law, then must we be all condemned; but if by works, as under grace, then, when God judges, He will separate between those who have received Christ—have entered into life and have turned to godliness, and those who have resisted His love;—between rebels against His grace and those who have received the mind of Christ.

ETERNAL LIFE.

“IN the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God; the same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made. In Him was Life and the Life was the Light of men.”

These words carry back the thought to something that existed before the worlds were—that existed from eternity—that was with the Father and that was in the eternal Word; which thing is that “eternal life” which God is said to have given to us. “This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life; and this life is in His Son.”—I John v. 11.

If people understood these words, “that eternal life which was with the Father," they would see that whatever this gift of God is, they must be taught of God what it is—that it cannot be anything they could have anticipated, and that therefore all conceptions of it formed and cherished in their natural darkness must be perfectly erroneous. Many questions on the subject of salvation arise from not entering into God's counsel. "The gift of God is eternal life;" that life which was with the Father before the world was; this is what God has given to us. When we live, it is with that life which was the Father's life from all eternity. These are great words, but not greater than the true meaning of the Holy Ghost. Wherein is the life of any Being? It is that out of which the enjoyment of that Being arises. The "eternal life" in God, therefore, is that in God Himself which makes Him blessed. God's blessedness must have a cause. It must spring from what He is; and the "eternal life" which was "with the Father" is that thing in God which makes God infinitely blessed.

Do not imagine it too bold to enter on this ground, and to consider wherein God's blessedness consists. It is not forbidden ground to those who are intended to be partakers of a Divine nature—"to be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ,"—to those whose peace is said to be "the peace of God which passeth all understanding,"—to those concerning whose joy it is said, that "their joy is the joy of the Lord, that they drink of the river of God's own pleasures and are filled with the fatness of God's own house." When I speak of "eternal life," I mean nothing else than that life which is in God, and which makes God to be infinitely blessed; and when God declares that He has given us eternal life, I understand Him as meaning nothing less than that He gives us a participation in that life which He has had from all eternity. And the whole history of the Incarnation of the Son of God has its explanation in this, as the great purpose which God had in view.

They can little understand that Christ is in truth very God as truly as He is man and that His people are the Temples of the Holy Ghost, whose notions of salvation are those of mere safety—deliverance from penalties—being happy. God might have made us happy and given us safety in some other way, but safety and happiness do not amount to this gift. The birds of the air and the beasts of the field have a happiness which God has given them; but to say that God gives man eternal life is to say that God gives man to partake of that which is His own blessedness. It is to say that God has made provision for our having in us the feelings He has—for our loving what He loves—for our hating what He hates—for our being holy as He is holy—for our entering into a state of perfect sympathy with Him, and becoming one with Him in blessedness by becoming one with Him in character. In Christ God has thus blessed man; He has given to man a participation of His own nature, and thus a participation in all that springs from the possession of such a nature.

“And this life is in His Son.” If you understand what “eternal life” is, you will be prepared for knowing how this life is contained in Christ. If it be declared that there is life for me in Christ, this must mean that there is enough in Christ to enable me to live the life of God. It is not merely that Christ is a ground of confidence for me,—one to whom I may commit myself and feel safe,—but that there is that in Christ which will sustain in me a spiritual and divine life.

Christ says of Himself, “Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath everlasting life.” Observe, there is life in the broken body and shed blood of Jesus, because the holiness, love, righteousness, truth, goodness, and mercy, which were in God from all eternity, are now contained in manifestation in this body and blood; so that any person who (spiritually) understands what was revealed in the body and blood of Christ, is in the participation of God’s holiness, righteousness, truth, goodness, mercy, and love.

The man who knows the history of the atonement, has learned from that work of God what is meant by saying that God is love. Love is a feeling cherished towards a being; and if we would know what that feeling in God is, we may see it working in the life of Christ; so that, looking at His life, we learn what the love of God is. Creation could not fully manifest the love of God. It was love in God which moved Him to create; but the pure, unselfish character of love could not have been known, unless God had been seen loving His enemies, with a love which, even while their enmity continues, is flowing out towards them, and desires to bring them from their evil state back to Himself, and to bless them with Himself.

Love and holiness are words used in the Bible to convey to us the full conception of the character of God; and it is in receiving them in that distinction in which they are thus used that we shall come to know God's full character. It is very important that we should see in the Atonement a pure condemnation of evil as it is in itself. If we do not see this in it, we see nothing,—we remain in ignorance of the true God, for we have not been taught to understand the nature of His holy hatred of sin.

A proud man has a distinct aversion to everything that makes light of his authority, and we might conceive of God's hatred to sin as of this kind. But mark the different apprehension which the Atonement teaches us: from it we learn that God hates the evil thing as it is in itself; not that it produces in Him any ill-will to the sinner, or any feeling of revenge, or that His dignity, so to speak, is hurt by it; for there is no such thing in God. I know when such words are used, you are ready to say, Who would conceive thus of God? Oh! you do not know your own hearts. It has been said that revenge is so sweet a morsel that the gods keep it to themselves! In this the heart of man speaks out—conceiving of God as altogether such a one as himself. But the fact of Christ's suffering for me, in order that the curse due to my sins might not rest upon me, the sinner, teaches (when I see that Christ is God) that the curse did not spring from a spirit of revenge in God, but from a pure condemnation of sin, and a feeling as free from selfishness as love itself.

It is said that God has given to us—to all—eternal life; to all, for God calls on every man to believe it concerning himself; (“us” in my mouth, speaking as God’s ambassador to my fellow-men, means myself and those to whom I speak.)

But it is sometimes asked, “How can it be that all men have eternal life in Christ, when it is written, “He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life?” We see that in Christ are all things pertaining to life and godliness, so that to him who has Christ there is no lack; he who can say Christ is mine, has all things; but this is the difficulty; how can a man say that Christ is his?” When God says of Christ that He is a Mediator He means that there is in Christ all that is necessary for our approach to God, whatever barrier sin may have interposed. But were it according to the truth of God to hold, that a person might know all that is contained in Christ and yet have occasion to say, "All this provision is desirable and lovely, but how am I to make it my own?"—in that case the space between man and God would still be impassable; we should see God brought near in Christ, but Christ Himself still at some distance from us. Christ would not be enough, some additional Mediator would be required; for the difficulty of getting at the provision which is in Christ would still keep us far from God. But Christ is not far off; the question is needless, How hath any man the Son,—How does Christ enter into any man? Believing the truth concerning Christ we have Christ in us; for it is written, "he that believeth hath life," as well as "he who hath the Son hath life." These two are but different statements of the same fact.

THE WATERS OF LIFE.

THE "Waters" of life offered by the Prophet in the name of his God to men who were spending their labour for that which could not satisfy them, are, he assures them, got without money and without price. They are to be enjoyed, that is, in a way of knowledge, not in a way of labour. "Hearken and eat;" as much as to say, in hearkening to me you will eat that which is good—"Hear, and your soul shall live." There is a constant tendency to come to God with money and with price,—to try to do something to distinguish ourselves from others, and to put ourselves out of the common state of mankind; and when in this spirit men peruse the words of the Holy Ghost, instead of encouraging words, they make them discouraging. Thus, when it is said, "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," I have heard people reply, Yes, but I must come: if I do not come, I shall not get the rest. The intention of God is to fix our attention on the person to whom we are to come, "Come unto Me," but in a self-righteous state we fix our thoughts on the word come: and we suppose at once, this must be the money, this must be the price, and get into difficulties as to the way in which we should come.

The Holy Ghost has used a variety of expressions in order to prevent this error, and yet men will fall into it. In one place it is Come; but, in another place it is said Look; in another Believe; in another Hear; all to prevent our thoughts from resting on the act of our own mind, and to fix our attention on the object presented, which is Jesus Christ. Had it been any other subject but that of salvation, people would have committed no mistake about it. If I had said, "Hear! I have good news for you," you would never have asked, how am I to hear? If I had said, "Look, and you will be rejoiced at what you see," you would never have asked, how am I to look. If I had said, "Believe, and you will find it much to your profit," you would merely have considered whether what I said was true, without turning your attention to the act of believing. Why is it that when such expressions are used in religion, people's attention is turned away from the thing spoken of, to themselves? Just because men would turn the act of hearing, believing, looking (which is a bare receiving from God), into the money and the price by which to purchase what God gives. But the news which God sends you—like every other piece of news—is to put you in the attitude of a listener, and not to put you in the attitude of doing something; when God invites the children of men to drink of the waters of life, He is just inviting them to hear what He has to tell them. When God says, I give you "life"—"eternal life," the very expression should make you pause and consider, Does "eternal life" mean nothing more than pardon, or safety, or escape from hell, or being happy when I leave this world?

We are brought, by the very words used, to this, that we must listen as little children—with the feeling that we have to be taught what the gift is. Of myself I do not know what eternal life means; I must therefore listen to God. "The life was manifested," says St. John, "and we have seen it and bear witness and show unto you that eternal life which was with the Father." Now, we learn from this, that what God gives in giving "life" is something which was with God before the worlds were made; and thus it is obvious that this "life" is not anything of which you could have had—before it was "manifested"—the most distant conception. God's gift is His own communicated life; not the life of mere happiness, such as the birds of the air or the beasts of the field have, but God's own life. It is nothing less than the impartation of the Divine nature, so that we may be, as it is written, "heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ." To be an "heir of God" is to have the germ of God's own character; we may enjoy God's gifts without possessing His life, but we cannot enjoy God Himself without having His mind in us. I cannot rejoice in God's holiness without being holy, or in God's love unless I love, or in God's truth unless I am true. When God speaks of making us "heirs," the meaning is that He imparts to us a divine nature, so that we may enjoy what He is. This is what God calls "life." This is the thing contemplated, when He says by the prophet, "Come to the waters." These are the waters; something in drinking of which we shall be partakers of a divine nature, and be made sharers in God's own blessedness.

The "life" of God, as life in man, was manifested in that of Christ; that is to say, God's eternal love and holiness and power and truth are taken out of that unrevealed condition in which they were before the worlds were made, and put into the blood-shedding of Christ, where they are all expressed. We there see Christ dying for His enemies—pouring out His life for them. The love of God is manifested in that Christ died for us. The holiness of God is manifested in that nothing else than the blood of Christ could sanctify us to the service of God.

But there is more than this in the bloodshedding of Christ. It is not only the means of God's character being unveiled, but of man's sin being forgiven. God is not now imputing sin to us. The word is, "God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself, not imputing unto men their sins." The glory which was in the Cross is intended to impart to us the character which we look at—that looking at it, and being made like it, we should live. I cannot look on this manifestation of the Holy One without fear and trembling; I cannot really look on it at all, unless I see that it has put away my sins. It is because I see that the work of Christ has put away my sin, that I can look at the glory of God in the face of Christ Jesus, and calmly and deliberately learn and weigh its meaning.

But it is not enough that I am delivered from the inquiry, "What must I do to get the pardon of my sins?" I require to have a power, a capacity, a strength, in which to enter into the deep things of God. And this farther thing is contained for me in the work of Christ. He ascended up on high, and received gifts for the rebellious. The first of these gifts is the Holy Ghost. If in Christ I have the Spirit, then, though of myself I cannot discover and receive the manifested glory, yet in Christ's Spirit I can. This is the office of the Spirit—to take of the things of Christ, and show them to us—to sustain us in the vision of what Christ is. When the Spirit of Christ is revealing the glory of Christ in us, Christ lives in us. By the work of Christ we are all placed in a condition to be influenced by the same motives which influenced Him—to be of the same mind with Him.

My dear friends, Can you individually say of what you have now heard, "I know it is God's plan, because I find it taking effect in me; I do find all things pertaining to life and godliness in Christ Jesus ; I am made a sharer in a Divine nature ?” If not, you are not fit to be confessors of Christ before men ; you are not of the family of which Christ Jesus is the elder brother. You may be earnest, serious, painstaking people, but you have not in you the mind of Christ—God’s plan has not yet met with its accomplishment in you.

ENTER YE IN AT THE STRAIT GATE.

OUR Saviour is not here to be understood as having any other meaning than He elsewhere has in preaching the Gospel. He must be understood as meaning the same thing as when He says,—“Repent;” or, “Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness;” or, as when He says, “Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest;” or, as when He said by the mouth of the Prophet, “Look unto me and be ye saved, all ye ends of the earth.” All Christ’s annunciations of the way of life, if rightly understood, will be found to be the unchanging annunciation of the one everlasting Gospel.

And what is this gate and this way? Christ Himself must be both the gate and the way, for

He says, "I am the door;" and, also, "I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." "By Me," He says again, "if any man enter in, he shall find pasture." "Through Him," says the Apostle, "we have access unto the Father;" and again, "Having, therefore, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way."

And how is Christ both the gate and the way? He has removed the barrier between us and God, but He has done more than this,—He has taken the place of what He removed and has thus become a "way"—a living way—to the Father; not merely an open way, but a living way. In calling Him a living way, I refer to His character as the risen Saviour, who has ascended up on high, and who is now the Dispenser of the Spirit, that in the Spirit we may worship God; I refer to the second part of His work, His work now, as it is set forth in Ephesians, chap. ii. from the 14th verse, "He has abolished in His flesh the enmity."

My dear friends, if the "enmity" here spoken of was not slain by the death of Christ, it never will be slain. His work was not a preparation for slaying the enmity, it was the actual slaying it; it was not a preparation for making peace, but the actual making of peace. Having made peace, He preached it. And Christ is not merely one who has made the way open and clear, He is the living way; not like a road to be walked on, but a power to bear one along. He is not merely one in the thought of whom I can come to God, but He is also one in whose strength I can come; He is one who can give me power to come to God.

The command, "Enter ye by the strait gate," is just as if it were said, "Go to God through Him who has put away your condemnation; go to God through Him who has the Spirit for you." It is not, Go to God for a Mediator, for a Saviour; it is, that God, having given you a Mediator, you are to "enter in" through Him. The command is, Go to God through Christ. Mark the unconditional character of the gift of Christ implied in this command. To tell a person to enter in by this gate, if he supposes that there is something for him to do before he can know that Christ is his, will be, in his estimation, to address to him a premature command, for he thinks that he must first "appropriate" Christ—make the gate his own—and after that, enter. But, is not the command "Enter in" the same thing as saying, "You have nothing to do but to enter in?" Is it not just saying "Enter in at once."

People readily say, "There is no ground of confidence but Christ,"—and God forbid they should think otherwise,—but we do not find them entering. They know not of what they speak, and the simplicity that is in Christ—the cross revealed—remains a stumblingblock to them.

Now, who does obey the command to "enter in?" Only the person who is entering; only he who is actually worshipping God in the Spirit through Christ.

When you tell men that they cannot worship God, and at the same time command them to worship, you seem to them to utter a contradiction—to call them to enter in at a shut gate; and though you tell them of strength in Christ, you still do not seem to them to open the gate. If a man understood what is meant when it is said that God alone worketh, he would see that to tell him that in Christ's strength he can do all things, is to open the gate; and he would not only see the gate to be open, but that it is the only gate by which man can enter. If a man knew himself, and understood what it is to worship and serve God, he would say,—Unless you can tell me that Christ will do everything in me you need not speak to me at all. If you think I can do it, I can only say,—All the thoughts of my heart are only evil continually; I have examined my purposes of obedience, and find they are all rottenness; and therefore unless you can tell me of some strength other than my own, I must remain as I am.

This is the language of one who knows himself; let him go on to listen to the voice which says, Lean upon me, I am the Lord thy strength, the living way, a road which has life and strength for thee; let him hear Christ saying, "My grace is sufficient for thee," and let his heart answer with St. Paul, "Then I will glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me."

My dear friends, in the name of the Lord I call upon you to walk in this narrow way; so only will you be strong and able for duty. The ordinary duties of life, properly done, imply obedience to the command, "Enter in at the strait gate." It is a very easy thing for a man to relieve another's wants; but to do it as Christ would have done it, to have the mind of Christ in doing it, this is the straitness. The path is the same as the gate, it is continually a narrow path; because it has no fence to hinder your going to the right or the left, there is always need for the exhortation to keep the one line, and there is a "straitness" felt in so doing because of our continual tendency to go to the right or the left. But this way, strait as it is, leadeth unto life; and not only so, but in it there is life. We do not only say to you, If you could see the end of the way you would see life and eternal blessedness (though this is true); but we say, Walk in this way for it is life now. Now, there is in the keeping of God's commandments an exceeding great reward, not for nor after, but in the keeping of them. "Because I seek Thy precept," the Psalmist says, "I walk at liberty."

I beseech you therefore hear the voice calling on you to enter in at the "strait gate" and to walk in the way of life, hear the voice which says not "make preparations for going in," but "Enter, come and be saved; come and find rest."

REPENTANCE.

REPENTANCE is a change of mind towards God; it is the change which takes place when one who has been in a state of alienation from God comes into a state of reconciledness to Him; and this change our Lord has told us is essential to salvation. "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish."

God will never bless the sinner in his sins; and, therefore, to be blessed we must be brought from our sins. Yonder is the region of enmity and rebellion, on this side is the region of those who are reconciled, and God declares a blessing to rest on this region, and a curse to rest on yonder region. How can happiness be communicated to those who are yonder in the region of rebellion? Shall God take the blessedness which has hitherto been limited to the one side, and send it to those who are on the other side? or shall He bring them back from the region of enmity and the curse, to that of reconciledness and blessing? The latter is God's way. This is the amount of the statement, Except ye repent ye shall all perish.

Repentance being thus indispensable, let us consider what it is,—what takes place when one who has been making flesh his arm comes to trust in God. Repentance is not a middle point between the right state and the wrong; there is no standing-ground between the two states of mind. It is important to mark this, because things are often understood to be implied in repentance which are only true concerning it if we include the feeling into which the person turns.

The state of mind into which the sinner is called to come is just this, that God should occupy in his heart that place which self naturally does; that all separate individual personal interests should be swallowed up in the interest of God's great plan; that all taking of credit or of praise, all seeking of distinction for self, should give place to the acknowledgment of God,—that the strong man should not glory in his strength, nor the rich man in his riches, nor the wise man in his wisdom, but that “he who glorieth should glory in the Lord, who exerciseth loving-kindness, judgment and righteousness in the earth.” This is the condition of one who has repented, that without any effort—as the free working of his own mind—he gives to God that place which self occupied before.

My friends, you have been accustomed to associate repentance with sorrow, and you may well do so—it is a right association. Perhaps you are not so accustomed to associate it with joy, but the association is equally true and right. No one will have any difficulty in acknowledging it to be a sorrowful thing. He who repents is now giving to God the place God always ought to have had in his heart; it is impossible that any one should have God reigning within him, without deeply feeling the evil of the condition from which he is turned, and this he cannot do without sorrow. No one can be conscious that it is a new thing for him to give his heart to God ; that up to the very moment of his doing this he had been as a god to himself, and not be stung with the feeling that it has been so : and thus repentance necessarily includes a holy sorrow for sin ; a godly sorrow, a sorrow springing from his being godly, springing from God being his God. But if the sorrow be godly, it must be a sorrow connected with joy. The very conception of godliness implies it. To separate joy from godliness would be to deny this first principle of all religion, that in the keeping of God's commandments there is great reward. No one who sympathizes with the mind of God can conceive of repentance as separated from joy, or of turning to God as not being a most joyful thing. The glory of God is involved in this.

The Gospel is the annunciation to sinners of a goodness in God leading to repentance. It declares a present love in God to the sinner, which would not only have him back again, but which has given him all things needful to enable him to return.

If a man must repent before he is entitled to say "God loves me," "Christ died for me," then no man can repent. The apostle says of the law that it is weak through sin. Man ought to love God, but while under a feeling of condemnation he cannot love; the right of God to the love of His creatures is the right of the law, which it can demand, but cannot possibly receive. But when God comes to us in the Gospel saying, Repent, it is implied that He has changed our circumstances, so that it is now possible to repent. He has removed the barrier: there is nothing to prevent our coming to Him with perfect confidence; in the gift of Christ every needful title is conferred.

When a person thinks he must have repentance and love in himself, before he can rejoice in God; when he thinks he must be holy before he is entitled to rejoice, he is under an entire misconception, seeing that rejoicing in God is holiness. Coming to God is the righteous state of man. The righteous man is not one who has a right to trust God, but one who is actually trusting in Him; and the wicked man is not one who has no right to trust in God, but one who ought to trust and is not trusting.

And now, my dear friends, seeing that it is impossible to repent without that knowledge of God which puts us in a condition to rejoice in Him, how has it come to pass that men seek for repentance before this knowledge? The fact is undeniable that God has been understood to say, Repent, and when you know that you have repented, then you may be assured of My forgiveness and My love. I know that men will say they claim no merit for their repentance, but we have to do with facts, not with words; it matters not whether a man says he takes credit to himself or not; if it be from something in himself that he gathers the assurance of God's love to him, it is contrary to the principle of the Gospel. People get rid of this by saying repentance is the work of the Spirit, therefore there is no merit in it. But how does the Spirit work? Am I made holy without the truth or by the truth?

Am I made holy first and then shown that Christ is mine, or does the Spirit shew me Christ as mine, and thereby make me holy?

But men say, 'if we know our sins are forgiven what is the use of repentance?' I have been labouring to show you that a man cannot repent unless he knows that his sins are forgiven; let me now show you the radical misconception which such a question implies. It implies that the only value of turning from sin to God is that we shall thus obtain forgiveness; that if God so loved me as to give His Son to die for me I need not be sorry for having sinned against Him and grieved Him; that because I am at liberty to return as a child to a Father I may remain at a distance. According to this, forgiveness—the chief value of which is that it leads to repentance—is itself the great object; and delight in God, conformity of character to Him, all the change from darkness to light,—these have no value but as grounds of forgiveness. Oh, it makes the heart bleed that knows anything of the loveliness of holiness, anything of God's character, anything of Him who is the chief among ten thousand, to hear people ask, 'why should I repent if God has forgiven me?' What has ever made any one grieve over his sin, but just that he has found the love of that God who has blotted out his sins? Suppose a son banished for his offences from his father's house, and I come saying 'I have good news for you, your father freely forgives you and invites you home, would he say, 'If my father forgives me I need not be sorry for having displeased him : ' 'if he invites me to return I may stay where I am?' But suppose I say, 'Your father has not forgiven you, but if you repent, if you begin to love him, he will forgive you'—could he repent? Could he begin to love? He might do many things, but would not everything he did to win back his father's favour have a selfish reference to his own advantage?

Repentance is not a selfish thing. I do not say there is any sin in desiring to obtain happiness or to escape misery; but I say decidedly there is no holiness in it. There is no holiness in desiring to get to heaven or to escape from hell, just as there is no sin, but neither is there any holiness, in a drowning man trying to swim ashore. It is a mere instinctive feeling. And though the desire for safety is not in itself sin, yet, passing for holiness as it does, it comes to be a very great evil. When a man measures his holiness by his desire to escape from hell and to get to heaven, and regards his anxiety to have an interest in Christ as a proof of holiness, he is under a terrible delusion. God our Creator, knowing our frame, has considered that it is natural that we should wish to escape from misery and seek for happiness ; that so long as the question of our own safety is a doubtful one it is impossible that we should not be working for the sake of this safety; and therefore, desiring that we should be holy, that we should act from higher motives, He has given us Christ, and shewn us enough in Christ on which to rest in perfect peace. He has thus set us at liberty to love Him ; He has said, 'I have taken away the necessity of your working for a piece of bread ; what remains but that you love and serve me as a son does a father ?' It is because God has done this that the word has gone forth, Repent.

Is it then unreasonable to ask, Have you repented ? or to expect that he who has repented should know that he has ? Yet it is sometimes thought a right and humble thing not to know. I beseech you to consider what you are doing under cover of that word humility. I beseech you, be no longer found blending light and darkness : remember that however this uncertainty may suit the purposes of the kingdom of darkness, it never can be according to the principles of the kingdom of light. To be saved implies a change of character and also a partaking in the joys God confers on His children ; to perish implies abiding in a state of sin and of darkness. It is casting obscurity on the whole character of sin and holiness when men so confound them as to dream that all may be well, though they are quite uncertain whether they have, or have not, repented unto life.

CONFESSION.

THE natural conscience of every man is sufficient to convince him of the fact that he does many things which he ought not to do, and that in all things he offends ; but the Spirit of God in men will alone cause them to confess sin truly, because it is one thing to admit the fact that we are not what we ought to be, and another thing to admit the sin of this fact, the guilt which lies at our own door. It is one thing to say that we are in an evil state, and another thing to refer that state to ourselves personally ; to feel that it is altogether of ourselves, that there is no excuse to be found for it, that in respect of it we are altogether guilty ; and really to feel the righteousness of God's condemnation of that state. This last alone is confessing sin. It is not confessing sin to admit the fact that it is an evil state ; that sin is a base thing ; that when you contrast a holy state with an evil state, the holy state is the best. To confess sin is to come to the conclusion in your heart, and freely with your lips to make the admission, that your breach of God's law and your not loving God with your whole heart, soul, mind and strength, and your not loving your neighbour as yourself, are justly charged against you as your guilt ; in respect of which neither the force of example, nor the influence of education, nor circumstances, nor a corrupted nature, furnish any adequate apology. To confess sin is to take God's word in the matter, to stand on God's side in the question ; it is to join God against myself, and to feel that the fact that this sin is my sin, that this corruption is my corruption, does in no respect interfere with the sternness with which I recognize that sin is a thing for which the guilty person is righteously held responsible.

My dear friends, you know well that so far is the condition of joining God in condemning ourselves from being the natural condition of man, that instead of this, it is the fact that whenever any thing is charged upon you as in itself evil, the first movement of your mind is to look about for an excuse. Every one who looks into his own heart knows well that this is its tendency ; and that in comparing ourselves with others, and in considering our circumstances, our trials and our temptations, we in general do not find it difficult to discover excuses for ourselves. It is seen to be so, from the language of men when they speak as if injustice were done them by the opinion of others, and when they speak of their conduct appearing worse to others than it would appear if people knew all the circumstances, and when they say that their hearts and their motives are right though their actions do not come up to what others expect from them. In all this they shew that they have not yet been taught to confess sin ; that they have not yet been brought to stand on God's side and condemn their sin as truly and unhesitatingly as God condemns it.

You are accustomed to hear me teach that through the shedding of the blood of Christ the sins of all have been forgiven ; that God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them. You are thus accustomed to hear of a forgiveness which embraces all men and extends to all ; and you have often heard me refer our enjoyment of God's ordinary benefits, of the bounties of His providence, of the air of heaven, of the light of the sun, of the food we eat and of the raiment wherewith we are clothed, to this forgiveness. I have always sought to set forth to you that the fact of a sinful creature receiving any expression of kindness at the hand of a holy God while that creature is still in his sins, implies an atonement for the sin of that creature ; it being altogether inconsistent with the holiness of God that His goodness should come forth on creatures in a state of sin, if there had been no atonement made for sin. Were it otherwise, God's unchanging and eternal distinction between good and evil would be liable to be lost sight of and forgotten ; the blood of Christ is that which explains and casts light upon all the previous witness for God given in the rain and fruitful seasons.

I desire to refresh your memories with this truth now, because I am going to set before you something which is not the forgiveness extending to all, but is the personal enjoyment of that forgiveness by the individual. If we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins. That you may see the harmony between the two declarations, I would place before you what I conceive to be the real history of the fact, under the figure of the dealings of a father with a prodigal son. Suppose there were two fathers, each of whom had a prodigal son; and that the one father sent this message to his son, 'I am grieved and offended at your conduct, I have shewn you much kindness, but you have broken my heart; wherefore I disinherit you, let me never see your face again:' whilst the other sent this message, 'You have grieved me, you have broken my heart, you have made me restless and sorrowful; yet return and dwell with me as a son, you will find my fatherly heart as warm towards you as ever.' Would you not say that there was a difference between these two fathers ; that the one was relentless and would not forgive his son, whilst the compassion of the other was kindled within him, so that he did forgive ? Just such is the difference between the mind which men in their blindness have ascribed to God, and that which is really God's mind as expressed in the work of Christ ; this is the forgiveness extended to all His prodigal sons in this day of grace. To none has God said 'I banish you from my presence ;' to all He says 'Return to me as dear children : be my heirs ; possess the inheritance of children.' This is a real substantial forgiveness, independent of all returning. The word of God might have been 'Depart ; you will find no access to me, no space for repentance, though you should seek it carefully with tears.' The difference between saying 'Depart, thou cursed one' and 'Come back and dwell with me as a child'—this mighty difference is the 'pardon' which we preach to all ; and let no man make light of this difference—of this mighty boon. The error which I wish to guard you against is that of supposing that there is some barrier, some hindrance, something which is to be removed by your repentance or your faith or your tears; that there is yet unkindled in the heart of God any personal love to you as an individual, and that something is to be done in you in order to awaken it. I desire to guard you against the error of imagining that circumstances will ever be more favourable for your enjoying God's love than they are at this very moment. Yet I beseech you not to make light of the difference between the state of the person who has returned and that of him who has not. There is a difference in the circumstances of one who is welcome to return and those of one who has no invitation; but there is another difference, and a most important one, amongst those to whom the invitation is addressed. There is a welcome home which can never be enjoyed in the far country; there is a consciousness of God's favour which cannot be had away from God ; a pronouncing of us righteous, a freeing us from condemnation, which cannot be had while we are putting from us God's grace. St. Paul says, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit," which clearly implies that there is condemnation to all who do not so walk. What is this condemnation? It has respect to the condition of grace in which God has placed us. It refers to the distinction between those who are disappointing and those who are meeting God's wishes ; between those with whom God is grieved as rejecting His grace, and those over whom He is rejoicing as receiving His grace. It is the distinction between those in whom God sees a mighty love fulfilling its object, and those in whom He sees it failing of its object—the heart beating back all the love of God that is flowing to it, as the rock beats back the wave that dashes against it.

HUMILITY AND CONTRITION.

WHAT is involved in humility, or what is it to say that a man is humble? It is just to say that he takes his own place in regard to God ; that he is contented to be nothing, and to see God to be all in all : this is humility. Observe, there are two things here : that I should know my nothingness, and that I should be contented with my nothingness. And when am I contented to be nothing ? Just when, knowing that in God's sight I am nothing, I see that in God which makes me satisfied with my dependence on Him. Let me be in this condition of knowing concerning God that which reconciles me to my dependence, and what will be the result ? I shall delight in the thought of God ; I shall find my happiness in becoming more and more acquainted with Him ; I shall search after the knowledge of God as after hidden treasure, and welcome every discovery of God and of His glory.

Now you see that if a person is in this state, it is natural that God should dwell with him, and he with God. It is possible and likely. But humility on this earth must take a peculiar character from the circumstances of those in whom it exists ; and that character is expressed by the word contrition. Every angel in heaven is humble : but contrition has reference to sin, and to the feeling that I am not only nothing, but worse than nothing. There is nothing bad in being nothing ; but there is something bad in having forgotten my nothingness, in having fancied myself something, in having given place to pride, and in having become a god to myself. This is sin. Therefore humility in man never can come alone ; never merely in the way of feeling ‘ I am nothing, and I am contented to be nothing.’ There cannot be in a man the knowledge of his nothingness without a sense of contrast between this nothingness and his natural desire to be something. Contrition—the deep consciousness of unworthiness, of great evil as my own, of great sin as the just charge of God against me—is that which puts the sorrowful ingredient into humility. Humility as the condition of a sinner cannot exist without sorrow, sorrow for the sin which he has committed against God.

The contrite sinner is one who takes to himself the full condemnation of sin and does not diminish it one jot. He looks on the height, the depth, the length, the breadth of his iniquity; and makes no effort to make it appear less than it is, or to form a lower estimate of his guilt than is according to God's own estimate of it. He is a man who would give up the keys of his heart, and invite God to search, as with candles, its inmost recesses in order that all the evil that is in him may be discovered. One who can thus welcome God may dwell with God, and God is glorified in dwelling with the contrite one.

But how is it that any child of Adam can become a humble and a contrite one? How can I, a sinner, be made content with my dependence on God, and how can I help shrinking from the full acknowledgment of my sin? What is the provision God has made for producing in man humility and contrition? This is the provision: He proclaims "Peace, peace, to him that is afar off and to him that is near." The same thing is stated more distinctly and fully in the Epistle to the Ephesians ii. 13-18. "But now in Christ Jesus, ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For He is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in His flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances, for to make in Himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that He might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby; and came and preached peace to you which were afar off and to them that were nigh. For through Him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father."

In what sense is Christ said to have made peace before He preached it? Observe these words, "For through Him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father." Taking these as the key to the whole passage, we find that the making of peace was the producing a state of things in which men have access through Christ by the Spirit unto the Father, and that the preaching of peace is the announcing of this state of things.

Thus then we learn, that the peace which Christ made, was the opening up a way of access for sinners to come to God. This is peace; and is spoken of as peace, because it is the removing of the hindrance which existed to our being upon the side of God; it is the putting us in circumstances in which, in respect of God, there is no hindrance to our glorifying and enjoying Him. It is not the announcement that man is now, in his own heart and feelings, at peace with God, for this would not be always true; it is to be understood as implying that, on God's part, Christ has put away the barrier to communion with God which sin had created.

My dear friends, endeavour to realize that sin makes it inconsistent with God's righteousness to admit you into fellowship with Him; that, as sinners, you must necessarily be excluded from His presence, and from all enjoyment in Him; that you cannot come to Him, seeing He cannot receive you. We are so accustomed to feel as if we might come to God, that we have to be taught that, in respect of our condition as sinners, there is a barrier; that, as sinners, we have neither title nor power to come to Him; but, let this be distinctly conceived of, and then let what is wanting be conceived of. If it be true that God is the fountain of life—that all true happiness springs from communion and fellowship with Him—and that our own circumstances exclude us from these, what does One do for us who takes away the barrier, and takes it away so effectually that it shall be true not only that we may come to God, but that we have strength in which to come? It is clear that the benefit conferred corresponds with the evil removed; and that now, whatever there is in God as a fountain of life for His creatures becomes free to us. This removal of the barrier is otherwise expressed as the peace which Christ has made by the blood of His cross. When Christ shed His precious blood as a propitiation for the sins of the whole world; when He thus made atonement for our guilt, and took away our condemnation; when He led captivity captive, and ascended up on high and received gifts for the rebellious,—then was this peace made. From the moment that the removal of the “condemnation” which excluded men from coming to God was declared by the fact of the Resurrection, from that moment it might be said that we had “access by one Spirit unto the Father,” and that henceforth nothing, except ignorance of the fact that Christ has made this peace, could stand between any individual of the human race and his living in the enjoyment of all those things which pertain to life and godliness.

Observe that God, in the acceptance of the holy offering of Christ, did remove absolutely, unconditionally, without waiting for us to say whether we desired it or not, the barrier between Himself and us; and that He also gave to us Christ, on the ground of whose work the barrier was removed, to be to us a living way of access, having the Spirit for us to that end; so that He is revealed to us, as one in whose strength we can draw near to that God to whom we are free to come.

These are the facts concerning the work of Christ for all,—for every human being. The humble and the contrite man is the man who knows these facts.

In the knowledge of this peace which Christ has made, there is enough to make any child of Adam humble. As to our nothingness, the fact that a man has nothing at all to do in this great work of removing the sentence of exclusion and bringing himself into the condition of having free access to God—that this has been entirely the work of God in Christ—is enough to teach it. It is impossible for any man to see what the history of this work is, and to think of meddling with the matter, or having any share in the work. But humility consists, not only in knowing our nothingness, but in being contented therewith. The person whom I expect to be satisfied with his dependence upon God and to rejoice in it, is he who knows that God has so loved him as to give His own Son to die for his sins ; and who knows that this love has not been powerless, has not been merely a great but an effectual love ; a love that has provided all which he needs, seeing that Christ hath the Spirit for him.

What then is there to prevent his rejoicing in his dependence, when he has such a knowledge of God's heart towards him and of the provision made for him ? He alone who knows these things can rejoice in dependence on God ; for though people are apt to ask, ' How could anyone desire to be in better hands than in God's ? ' yet no man can see that in the present mind of God towards him which can cause him confidently to commit himself to God, except so far as he sees that God has given him Christ, and, in Him, all things pertaining to life and godliness. And as a man cannot be humble apart from the gift of Christ, so neither can he be contrite. He who does not know that peace has been made by Christ can never look his sins fully in the face, but has a continual inducement to make light of sin and to make out that it is not so evil a thing to be a sinner.

How then comes it to pass that humility and contrition are so often demanded as pre-requisites before which there can be no warrant to say 'Christ died for me, Christ has the Spirit for me?' It comes to pass in this way : God has written a law upon men's consciences, which remains after it has ceased to be written upon their hearts. God's intention in the Gospel is to re-write the law upon the heart. But the law in the conscience says 'thou shalt be humble, thou shalt be contrite,' while the proud heart still refuses to be so. How shall the proud heart, and the conscience recognising the law, be made to agree? There are but two ways in which this agreement can take place: the one is by making the heart really humble and contrite, and is what I have described as the result of knowing that Christ has made our peace. The other is, that instead of the heart becoming conformed to the law written upon the conscience, the heart should blind the conscience, and teach it to give good names to evil things. Thus, whilst the heart remains unchanged and the conscience still says 'Be humble, be contrite,' peace is attained by calling that humility which is not humility and that contrition which is not contrition. The marvellous thing is that men should succeed in this : but they do succeed. Having settled that they ought to be humble and contrite, they set about cherishing the hope that they are so ; and they attempt this with the more earnestness, and succeed the better, because they conceive that this humility and contrition, instead of being the fruit of tasting God's unspeakable gift, are somehow or other the conditions on which that gift is bestowed. But the humility and contrition which people hope and trust they are attaining, as a step towards peace, are humility and contrition in name only and not in reality.

Weigh then well the words spoken. It is a fixed and unchangeable thing that without humility, without contrition, you cannot dwell with God or God with you ; that the provision which is needful in order to your being humble and contrite is contained in the knowledge that Christ has made peace by the blood of His cross, that having led captivity captive He has received gifts for the rebellious : and that while this is sufficient provision, anything else is no provision.

*THE ROOT EVIL IN THE HEART OF

THE charge of evil which the Scripture brings against man, has reference to the tone and pervading temper of his life, to the secret spring of his actions; not to his occasional acts but to his ruling principle; to that in respect of which he does not suspect himself but in which he is himself deceived. The special evil of which I would now speak to you is this, that man sets himself up to be his own God; he casts off God as God, and acts as his own master, as one who is entitled to have a will of his own, to have a selfish and merely personal interest in things, and to pursue his own independent purposes. He is thus cut off from God's great plan, and is occupied with the secret individual plan that is interesting to his own heart. We must come to see, each for himself, that this is evil—that no man has a right to be the centre of interest to himself; that no man has a right, in looking upon the things about him, to consider and value them as they affect himself merely, but that every man is justly required of God to put this question, ‘In what light does God see and value these things; what plan is He pursuing with regard to them; how may I be found promoting God’s designs; how may I become the instrument of carrying out His purposes?’

I know well that what is hateful to God in this matter is not hateful to man, but is often well-pleasing in his sight. I know that the exhibition of a number of persons, each pursuing his own plans and forwarding his own interests and choosing his own pleasures, if only they be honest and decent and quiet and sober, gives no offence, but, on the contrary, appears beautiful, amiable, and desirable; and men feel as if their desire for mankind would be accomplished if all did so. The very thing that God condemns they justify. The outward wrong indeed they are ready to condemn : those particular forms of sin which distinguish some men from others in their natural state, appear to them as evil ; but that a creature formed and fitted for the purpose of enjoying and glorifying God should instead of this be glorifying and enjoying himself, in this men see no evil.

When any one is brought to see and really to condemn this godlessness of the heart, he will not go from worse to better among men, nor try to find comfort in contrasting his own conduct with that of others ; but, seeing that he is now contemplating that heart-scene in regard of which no man can say of his neighbour, 'My heart is better than his,' in regard of which every man who sees it must ever feel personally humbled and condemned,—he finds his comfort, not in contrasting himself with others, but in going at once to the contemplation of the character of God. "Thy mercy, O Lord, is in the heavens, and Thy faithfulness reacheth unto the clouds. Thy righteousness is like the great mountains ; Thy judgments are a great deep." (Ps. xxxvi. 5.)

The Psalmist sees the oneness which subsists between all God's attributes, and the delusion in which those are living who think that some parts of His character are opposed to others : that His justice is opposed to His mercy ; that His holiness is opposed to His goodness, tenderness and love. In all God's doings he sees but one character, one manifestation of the great truth that God is love.

You are little aware to what an extent men have come to separate between God's actions and His character : to what an extent they have come to look on what He does, not as revealing what He is, but as if it were some blind fate or necessity that produces events. I refer to the prevalent impression that things happen in the general course of God's providence according to some inscrutable divine purpose, but not because of God's thoughts towards them, or because of His love to them.

There is the greatest difference between seeing the rising of the sun in the morning, and the provision for your daily support of food and raiment, as coming to you merely in the ordinary course of things, and seeing them as coming to you directly from God, the expression of a feeling in His heart as distinct and clear as though He were to stretch forth His hand and place these things in yours.

But, dear friends, it is more especially when we demand of you the belief of God's love in Christ, that the habit of separating between God and the gifts of His ordinary bounty proves a real and disastrous loss. In respect of your present comfort and enjoyment of the things which are, there is a great loss sustained ; this, however, is comparatively a small matter. It is when the message of God's forgiving love in Christ is brought to you that you experience the full loss involved in this habit of thought. If you had been accustomed from your childhood to see that every breath you draw, every comfort you enjoy, is a manifestation of forgiving love, love to a sinner, love to an enemy who deserves it not;—then, when one comes and tells you that Christ died for you while you were yet a sinner, you would be ready to believe it, and to trust in the loving-kindness of the Lord, which you had already learned to see preserving man and beast in all the earth.

My dear friends, I wish you knew what an excellent thing trust in God is. You would not be so much puzzled about faith and works, if you knew that the right and holy and desirable state for men is that they should be trusting in the Lord; if you knew that all hatred of sin, all setting of ourselves apart for good works, is contained in trusting in the Lord. What is trusting in the Lord? It is having such a knowledge of His character as raises us above all dependence upon creatures, and brings us to have confidence in Him. Who is the God in whom I am to have this confidence? A God loving righteousness and hating iniquity. Who is the man who can have confidence in such a God? The man who has learned to love righteousness and hate iniquity. No man can commit the future to God and expect all good from God who has not been taught to choose what God chooses for him. No man can expect

God to do for him what is against God's own will, because he desires it. No man can trust God to gratify him in an evil way. The person who is trusting God must be trusting for a good thing; and therefore it is that the description of the holy and good throughout the Book of Psalms is that they trust in God. If you knew what trust in the Lord is, you would feel that once to get people to trust in God is to accomplish everything; and, seeing this, you would see it equally clear that no man can be brought to trust in God except through faith in what God is. A time is coming to all when the condition of understanding that they can go from all created things to God Himself, will be seen in that excellence which belongs to it, and God will receive that special glory which is given Him through the trust of those who trust in Him; when His people shall be placed in circumstances in which nothing but that security shall or can keep them in peace; when every refuge of lies will be swept away; when it will be found that there is no resting-place for the soul in the whole circle of the universe but in the name of God alone.

My dear friends, God has pronounced a curse on every one who maketh flesh his arm, and a blessing on every man who trusteth in the living God: this is the right condition of the creature; and if we are dwelt in by the Spirit of God, we shall be found saying "amen" to God's curse and "amen" to God's blessing. There is great glory to God in this. But if we look deep into the matter we must be conscious of a peculiar difficulty in entering into God's awful threatenings. We feel it easier to think that God will be merciful, than that a merciful God will punish the wicked. It is easier for us because of our ignorance, because we know not what is in God. But Christ, in whom there was continually dwelling the truth of God's love, always in the Psalms says "Amen" to God's future judgments. This is the explanation of many passages of the Psalms which look as if the Psalmist bore ill will to men. It is not so. It is not that Christ's love is limited by men's unworthiness, but that

He is recognising the great distinction between good and evil, and desiring that those who will not love God should experience that it is an evil and bitter thing to depart from the living God, in order that they may turn and live. His desire is that the ungodly should see the self-delusion and self-deception which are contained in the peace of those who know not God, and that God should continue His loving kindness to them that know Him and His righteousness to the upright in heart.

WE might reasonably expect that men would be desirous to know what God says and to have the authority of God in respect of what they believe concerning Him. Yet the fact is that men form a God to their own hearts' liking, instead of receiving the God who has revealed Himself in Jesus Christ. What is there in this revelation of God which men are slow of heart to believe, which men are unwilling to be taught concerning their God? It is God's love, my dear friends, it is God's love to yourselves individually. The objection is not to the general assertion that God is kind or gracious; but each man is unwilling to admit the love of God to himself, God's free, unbought, unmerited love, His love to man independent of what man is ; a love which in its mighty power is continually directed towards the man, notwithstanding all his sinfulness and rebellion. It is this interest in his well-being, this desire for his good, this pure and perfect love in God to man, which man is unwilling to believe. And why? Because to believe it is to have the consciousness of guilt. To admit the truth of this love, would be to have a voice within you testifying against your own sin, testifying that all the imaginations of your heart are only evil continually. It would be to have that within you which would expose the lie inherent in all human praise and consideration, and stain the pride of all human glory. The moment you see that it amounts to and implies this, there is a shrinking from the entrance of this knowledge of God's love to you into your heart : you do not wish to know yourself a debtor for love which you have never yet acknowledged, never returned ; to know that there has ever been a manifestation concerning the heart of the living God towards you, to which your heart was blind and deaf and utterly insensible. Oh, it is impossible for any man to believe God's free and unbought love without being covered with shame and confusion : this is the secret of the evil heart of unbelief ; a proud heart will not believe in a condemning love.

The love of God differs from our love to each other in that there is nothing in it flattering to our self-love. Accordingly it is unwelcomed by the natural heart. It has been said, "if you would make a man pleased with you, make him first pleased with himself." And this is truly the great principle of attraction and cohesion of human life. All human love is regarded as a tribute of esteem and is valued as such. The good opinion we form of each other is the acknowledged bond of affection between us. Take away the delusion of self-esteem, let the enchantment be broken, and let a man be reduced to the sober certainty that he is utterly unworthy of praise or esteem ; that in the estimate of the God of truth he is that evil thing which it required the blood of the Son of God to purify, and he will no longer find any charm remaining in human praise, for pride itself cannot receive gratification from praise which it knows to be wholly undeserved.

It is an awful thing to see an intelligent being who can distinguish between good and evil, between love and enmity, in the attempt to retain his own peace and self-complacency, shutting out the light that would disturb him, by denying God's love to all. If love be of God's character ; if it be of His very substance ; if God is love, then of necessity God loves every man ; yea, those who limit His love to some do actually deny that there is love in God at all, for this would not be love but mere partiality, and, however beneficial to those who are its objects, yet in respect of Him whose choice it is it can be no manifestation of character at all.

The attraction of unbelief then is this, that it allows man to remain far from God. We draw near to God not by change of place but by change of mind, in receiving God's truth into us, the truth of God's character, the truth of His presence ; so that He becomes to us not a Being spoken about, or speculated about, but the present, living God before whom man takes his place humbly as a creature, and in whose glory, albeit it proves his own nothingness, he has come to find his supreme delight. Belief is that condition of mind in which the realities of God thus act upon us—enter into our apprehension; and unbelief is the condition of mind in which these same realities are not realities to our apprehension. It is unbelief which makes the “far country.” To fall into unbelief is to depart from the living God. Whither, indeed, can I go from His presence! There is no departure of that kind. But this is what man may or may not do—in doing which he drinks of life, in not doing which he tastes of death—he may have that God, who is in fact present with him, present to his heart, to his thoughts and feeling; or he may hold back from so receiving God to dwell with him.

We are exhorted by the Apostle to be watchful against the evil heart of unbelief; and yet that evil heart is common to every child of Adam. In what sense then are we called upon to take heed lest it be in ourselves? One thing is clearly taught us by the fact of the admonition, that it depends on the man whether he is to have the heart of unbelief or not. It would be unreasonable to call on you to keep your heart with all diligence unless you have it in your power to do so. You therefore receive a lie into your hearts when you would put responsibility for the evil heart of unbelief away from yourselves and refer it to some necessity of your condition, and, while admitting in words that you ought to believe, hold that you cannot help your unbelief. It is quite true indeed that the heart of man is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked, and that man beareth this heart along with him to the very day of his death; but it is not true that any man is at any moment under the necessity of allowing the evil heart to work unbelief in him. No man is obliged to submit himself to this evil heart, so that it should manifest its evil in the existence of unbelief; no man is forced to have his estimate of what God speaks determined by the inclination of his heart. God has given you power in the Spirit of Christ to live in the faith of Christ. It is this which makes it reasonable to caution you against giving way to unbelief. And remember for your help that the difference between a believer and an unbeliever is not the difference between one who has privileges and one who has them not, but between one who knows his privileges and one who knows them not. If the truth of anything I press on you depended on your being believers, then I could not thus address you till I knew whether you were believers or not. Hence the importance of seeing that faith is just the knowing as true what God has revealed Himself to be in Jesus Christ. And now I would ask of you who have not yet experienced the strength of those who walk in the strength of Christ, Why do you not believe in God's love to yourselves; that love which would bless you and make you holy; that forgiving, crucified love, which is seeking now nothing less for you than that you should be sons and daughters of the living God? What, I ask, is your reason for doubting that God in Christ is not "imputing sin unto you," and that God is waiting to dwell in you by His Spirit, making you living temples to His praise? There is, there can be no reason for your not believing these things except that to believe them cordially would imply the turning of your whole being to God, and for this you are not prepared. So long as you think of pardon as a future thing, you feel as in a right state in waiting and hoping for it; and thus your present want of joy in God does not appear to you to be either a sin or a shame. So long as you think of the manifested love of God in Christ as embracing some only, you are not absolutely self-condemned, as you would be in rejecting a love sure and personal to yourself. The holiness of these doctrines is the true secret of your unwillingness to receive them; but take heed I pray you lest there be in you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God.

THE TEACHING OF GOD IN THE CROSS OF CHRIST.

OH, if people would understand, when they allow the sense of unworthiness to separate between them and their God, that they are just adding sin to sin, they would not yield to it ! It is not by keeping away for a time that we shall be truly humbled ; it is in returning to contemplate God's love, with open face, that we shall be humbled. It is when we come very near to God, when we come into the light of the love out of which we had departed, and feel that it still flows out to us fresh and full even as it did before—that it is unchanged although we be changed—it is then that we are humbled and reproved, and at the same time taught that there is just one good and right state for a man to be in, the state of rejoicing in his God.

When I say to a person "rejoice in God," and he says, "you may have this joy, for you have repented ; you are a changed being, a new creature ; but I am not so yet :" such a person does not know that to repent, to be a new creature is just to come and delight in the name of God. So long as he imagines that he must first repent and then receive the message, so long he will not receive it. I warn you who have not yet rejoiced in God to be aware of this mistake : to know that the transition from the evil state which God condemns, to the righteous state in which God can rejoice over you, is just one step, and not many steps, one change, and not many changes, one movement of your heart from being away from your God, to turning towards Him.

I will now explain to you, on the subject of joy and trust in God, that the ground of our confidence is not a promise addressed to individuals by their names, but a promise sure to the just. A promise is held out to those who will trust God for it. This is the condition of those who shall ultimately "receive" the promise, that they are now trusting God that they shall receive it. Observe, this confidence of hope is not a certainty that you as an individual are promised of God to enter into blessedness, but it is a certainty enjoyed in trusting God for an expected good, that it is a thing for which all may trust Him. This does not alter the degree of the confidence of the person trusting, but it alters the character of the confidence ; it makes it, not the mere expectation of an event, but the expectation of something from God. People say 'If that which you call upon us to believe be true, it will be true whether we believe it or not.' Now this is so as to the fact that God loves you, that Christ died for you, that there has been an inheritance purchased for you ; but the possession of the inheritance depends upon your actually trusting Christ for it. This is true of those who trust in Christ for the purchased inheritance ; it is not true of those who are not thus trusting. What I ask you to believe is, that in giving you Christ, God has given you the inheritance, and that Christ has it for you ; and I know that if you see Christ as having it for you, then you will trust Christ for it, you will be one of those who now repose in joyful confidence upon God's promises, and who will in due time enjoy their fulfilment. It is no ground of comfort in thinking of your prospects, to know that the inheritance has been purchased for you, unless we know that you are trusting Christ for the inheritance ; and therefore with the fullest and most entire belief that God loves all of you, that Christ died for every one of you, I can still have no peace concerning any individual among you, until I see that individual holding the confidence and rejoicing in God.

Now what is the basis of the confidence towards God which is implied in rejoicing in Him ? We must have some sure and certain thing to rest upon in order that the confidence and the rejoicing may be " firm unto the end." And such a basis we have in the Cross of Christ. By that He laid the foundation for His own resurrection from the dead ; and by that He laid the foundation for His being our resurrection and our life ;

by that He laid the foundation for all the blessings which are stored up for us in Him, and which are to flow to us through Him. To know the glory which the Son gave the Father in the Cross is to know the foundation upon which the whole rests. You are accustomed to hear that Christ, by a sacrifice for sin, condemned sin in the flesh. These are words with which you are acquainted. Do you know their meaning? Do you truly apprehend the substance of Christ's work? Do you understand what it is that God calls you to know when He calls on you to look at the Cross of Christ? I beseech you look to God to enable you to receive the word which I speak, and be not satisfied with mere empty sounds. As long as you are not put in much peril, you may have peace, you know not why nor how, from a form of sound words; but a form of sound words will afford no peace at all in the hour of trial. Now in order to understand how Christ condemned sin in the flesh, remember that Christ is God. Let not this for a moment be out of your mind. Remember that He did not cease to be God when He became man. Say to yourselves, Here is God dwelling in my nature, surrounded by my temptations; in circumstances just like mine and exposed to be affected by them just as I am. What was His history in these circumstances? Did not Christ continually do while on earth the very opposite of what we do? did He not continually feel the opposite of what we feel? did He not continually speak the opposite of what we speak? He spoke as never man spake. He felt as never man felt. He went about employed in a way in which man had never been employed. He did this when He took our place; when He became our Brother; and He thus set forth what we ought to be as opposed to what we actually are. He among sinners, the brother of sinners, was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners; and thus, by being the opposite of what we are, He condemned what we are: He proved it was not the right thing; and not only so, but further proved (and this is most important) that there was no reason why we should be what we are ; that the demand on us to be holy is a righteous demand.

Every one is naturally disposed to say, It is my circumstances, my nature, my temptations—it is from these that my sin springs. God always testifies the opposite. He says, It is not your circumstances ; it is your own evil heart of unbelief, your own will, your own self that chooses the evil and rejects the good. Some have been bold enough to speak out plainly and maintain that man's circumstances excuse his conduct. Others who do not affirm this so directly, yet talk of the effect of education and circumstances as an excuse for sin, at least to a certain extent. But the great question between God and man has always been, Is man blameable for his sin ? Now this question is in fact the question whether God is righteous in punishing sin, for if sin be the result of our circumstances how can it be said to be our own and not God's doing ? The recognition that sin is our own is necessary to a true sorrow for sin. You must be taught to see that for sin you are yourselves to blame, that sin is altogether of yourselves, by seeing that Christ in your nature and in your circumstances was perfectly holy. Do you say that Christ was God, and that this makes a wide difference? He was indeed God. But you must remember that it was through the eternal Spirit, and not in His own might as the eternal Word that Christ presented Himself in our nature without spot to God; that He laid aside His glory and was content to be constantly dependent on His Father for strength and support, just as we are; and if it be the sure truth of God that Christ has the Spirit for us, then is there in Him a perfect provision as well as a perfect example for us that we should follow His steps. He showed us in our own nature and circumstances what we are called to be, and what God has, in the gift of Christ to us, made provision for our being; therefore He did truly condemn sin in the flesh, and His work in our flesh in respect of its perfect righteousness was a perfect condemnation of our sin.

But further mark the great importance of Christ's work in its sacrificial character. Christ condemned sin not only by being the opposite of sin, but by giving Himself as a sin-offering to God. By submitting in His death to undergo the curse of God upon sin, He gave His testimony to the righteousness of God's curse upon sin. He gives up the human nature in which He stood to the law of death, and this though He Himself was holy and without spot of sin; and in so doing He confesses the justice of the penalty which that human nature (humanity) had incurred by transgression, and we are told that this yielding up of His flesh to death was a "sweet-smelling savour unto God," and that God does forgive sin through His blood.

But what is it that God delights in? What made the sacrifice of Christ an offering of a sweet-smelling savour unto Him? We see a holy innocent Being giving Himself up to suffering during all the days of His sorrowful life on earth, and at last to the agony of death, and to the endurance of that darkest of all hours in which He said "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" and we are told that God who is righteous, God who is love, regards this as a sweet-smelling savour; that it comes up before Him as the pure incense with that perfume and sweetness which was typified in the offerings of Noah; that it was of such influence with God as to be the foundation of a Gospel of pardon proclaimed to all the children of men: yea, we are told to look on every temporal blessing—on the very shining of the sun and falling of the rain—as the effect of this sacrifice, to look on the promise of the Spirit as a fruit of it: yea, that there is no one thing through all eternity in which God will show the exceeding riches of His grace which is not to be referred to it; that in a word the key to God's character and to all His doings is contained in it.

What question then can we ask of such deep importance as this—why was God so pleased with this sacrifice? Why did He so rejoice over it? Why did He cause it to be the foundation of His throne? Was it because of the amount of pain and agony endured? That alas is the feeling many have about the cross of Christ. But I ask, Is it the existence of pain and agony, were it ever so great—and it was great, it was infinite!—but is it this that God has built so much upon? Impossible; it cannot be. What then was it? It was the righteousness of the sacrifice, the holiness of the blood, the purity of all the tears and all the pain that Christ endured: it was because in that sacrifice God's eternal law of love was magnified and made honourable, because sin was thus condemned in our flesh; because in it God's love to sinners, God's hatred of sin was expressed; because the Eternal Word declared the Eternal Father, in that He became flesh and gave Himself to death for the life of the world, and thus God was manifested.

- On this foundation all rests. Christ having declared the Father's name; having shown us what the Father's love is, that He yearns over us with a love which was contented to die for us: and what the Father's holiness is, that He grieves and agonizes over our sinfulness; having thus declared the Father's name, God raised Him up to be a witness, a Leader and Commander, and gave Him power over all flesh. Thus He became to us the fountain of life, and received for us remission of sins, repentance, and all things pertaining to life and godliness. And now is the Gospel proclaimed to the children of men ; now they have access into the Holiest by His blood ; now they are in a condition to know God, to worship Him, and to delight in Him.

And what is the effect of my having been taught these things by the cross of Christ ? It is that I remember my ways, and am confounded and can never more open my mouth in self-defence. In the sight of this work of Christ I see that all my excuses and all my apologies for continuing in sin have been false ; that in the sight of the Lord my God there is no excuse for sin. No words can express my sense of unworthiness as I thus see myself in the Divine light of the cross of Christ. Not only have I been sinning without excuse all my life, but I have been sinning against the infinite love and holiness which were yearning over me morning by morning and day by day. This has been my history. I awake and find that all my past self-complacency and comfort in my fancied discharge of duty and conformity to the requirements of religion have been a dream. Thus I am taught by the blood of Christ the condemnation of sin in the flesh.

But what further do I see in the blood of Christ? Is it despair? No, I see my forgiveness. I see that all this guilt is no longer a barrier between me and my God. I see that Christ having died for us all, has done that which is fitted to give us all confidence towards God. I am shut up into this one thing, to look unto Jesus and be healed; to look and be saved; to see my sins, and to see them forgiven; to know that the longing I feel to be like my God is no vain longing, but a thing within my reach; because though I cannot, yet Christ in me can glorify the Father.

My dear friends, I would earnestly beseech those of you who have not yet known the love of God, to set aside all past notions and impressions and look at the thing afresh as now set before you.

My dear friends, will you not believe that God is good? You confess it in words but will you not own it in your hearts? Will you not believe in your hearts that God is grieved because of sin? You admit that He has forbidden it, that His law is against it; but you regard God's law as a lifeless thing, in which He has as little interest as the judge of an earthly court might have in the law which he is administering. But God's law is God's own heart come out in the shape of a law. When Christ magnified the law and made it honourable, He proved it to be God's heart, and so He glorified it. Do not feel then as if God commanded you to be holy and yet was personally indifferent whether you are holy or not. Oh, if you knew the truth, you would find God's very commandments to be all promises, His very laws to be encouragements; and you would find yourselves emboldened to come to Him for His Spirit, and to look to Him for His strength just because He required obedience; and instead of saying God has commanded, but I cannot meet His requirements, you would say I am commanded to do this because it is according to God's will; and therefore I may trust God to enable me to do it.

I beseech you to know that you have to do, not primarily with laws and doctrines, but with the living God : that you have to do not with rules or precepts or opinions, but with a real Person, a living God, One who does at this moment as truly see you and as truly think of you individually, as if you saw Him in this room. He is here. He is saying, O that my people would trust me! O that my people would meet my love! Love cannot exist, love is not love, if it does not desire a return ; God's love would not be love if it did not desire our love. But He loves us with an intensity of yearning which is according to the nature of love. He is drawing us to Himself with cords of love. As all rivers flow into the ocean, so God seeks that the affections of all hearts should flow into His own. God is not changed : His love was shown in the history of the man Christ Jesus, but it IS in the Heart of God ; it was shown in the days of Christ's flesh, but He is the same yesterday, to-day and for ever. It was then made known once for all ; for all times, for all persons, for all circumstances. The cross of Christ is to be seen as unveiling God's heart in its movement towards every human being, continually, without ceasing day or night ; whether we pray, or withhold prayer ; whether we seek His face, or turn from Him : this is the heart of God.

And yet those who are debtors to God for all things will dare to debate the question whether God loves them ! That you whom God has made, whom God has upheld ; you to whom His mercies have been new every morning ; you who owe everything to His forgiveness through Christ's blood,—that you should make God's love to yourselves personally, a question, is a daring sin. The question of His love has been answered long ago ; and he who denies it, denies the Lord that bought him, and counts the blood of the covenant a common thing. But men shrink from the full admission of this truth into their inmost heart, because there is no way of excusing distance from God but by limiting His love. There is no middle ground between the deepest self-abasement, the most entire self-loathing, and the denial of the certainty of God's love to you as an individual soul. There is a strange contradiction in your natural hearts on this subject. You will not believe that God loves you so as to have comfort and peace in the thought of His love ; and yet you will not believe that God can deal so hardly with you as to let the punishment of your sins fall upon you : you have some vague notion of a mercy, a disposition to spare, which is not love at all ; but which though not enough to give present confidence, lulls the fear of impending judgment. Why will you not be simply taught of God ? If God's ways are not as your ways, nor His thoughts as your thoughts, you must receive His own teaching in order to know Him.

O let the conviction of your own ignorance bring you to God that you may learn of Him from Himself, let it cause you to lean not on your own understandings, but on the Lord your God.

THE GLORY WHICH IS IN THE NAME OF GOD.

MY dear friends, the real importance of any influence; the power which, viewed in itself, it is fitted to exercise, is a different thing from its actual power on our minds. The extent, for example, to which the authority of God will influence an individual depends, not on the weight which really belongs to His authority, but entirely on the apprehension of it which that individual has. The real weight of the name of God on any one's mind depends just on what that person at the moment feels regarding the place and power of God, and the reality of His control over him. It is an awful thing to consider what a mere sound the name of God often is, owing to the power of the flesh to conceal

Him from us and to prevent our realizing what He is, and our absolute dependence upon Him. Hence it comes to pass that men can be familiar with the name and character of God in words, and yet have no feeling at all of God as God. The real cause of this widely-spread ignorance and indifference in the hearts of men to what God testifies of His own character is, that they have come to think of His appointments as if these were not expressive of feeling or character at all. They do not perceive that the different ways men have of explaining what comes to pass, are merely different ways of saying that things are as they are. In saying, for example, that the rain falls because the clouds are loaded with moisture you merely state the fact with more of the circumstances. If you say that food nourishes you by the action of certain organs of digestion and assimilation you are merely stating the fact that you are nourished, not explaining the cause of the fact. It must be thus so long as you do not refer the fact of life to Him who is the Doer of all things, even God; so long as you do not ascend to Him and see in His mind the reason of all things.

How different is the feeling which we find pervading the Psalms! The Psalmist is always seeing God in everything, and never separates between any event and Him. Even the oppression of the wicked, viewed in its bearing on himself, he ascribes to God. He speaks of the sufferings which he endured at the hands of sinful men as of God's waves and billows rolling over him, God's wrath lying heavy upon him. This is just seeing things truly, for God is in everything; and not to see that this is so is a doing away with God altogether, as regards any real living to Him or perception of Him.

There are two ways in which people escape from the feeling that God is in everything: one, by not thinking of God at all; and the other, by thinking of Him as One, who uses them for the accomplishment of certain unknown ends. In their ignorance of the fact that God is love, and while seeking for themselves a kind of importance which they never had nor can have, they have not perceived their true importance, and thus ignore the true value which belongs to man as weighed in the scales of God's love. And so men see no reference to their good in the ordinary course of events ; and while they single out certain things which they term their mercies, they ascribe the great bulk of God's actions to the pursuit of something, they know not what, which they call His glory, and regard only a few occasional remarkable events as the outgoings of love. And this is done even by people who are reputed to be pious.

But is it not true that God acts with a view to His glory, contemplating that glory in all He does ? Assuredly. But what is meant by this ? Are we to be satisfied with the word glory, and to suppose that it is something for the value of which all other things are to be sacrificed ; or are we to be instructed wherein God's glory consists ? God's glory is the manifestation of His excellence ; it is the showing forth of His goodness : and therefore to talk of its being the object of His actions, without knowing this, is to use words without any meaning. If God is making use of me for His own glory, He must be taking occasion to show His goodness by me ; and so it comes to this, that in saying God is doing a thing in which I am concerned for His glory, I am just saying that God is so acting towards me because He is good. You must find love to be the motive for what God does before you can say that it is for His glory.

Men, I repeat, are accustomed to distinguish between the events of their lives: to think of some as in the ordinary course of God's dealing ; and to single out others which they term their mercies, and mark as proofs of a desire to do them good. Now I wish you to understand that in these latter events God is not acting on some plan or arrangement whereby the particular benefit to an individual is attained by the sacrifice of other objects; but that He is acting throughout, in all events, on the same principle. The reason for the one description of events is the reason for the other; and the intention of God in both is love, where men do not see love equally as where they do see it.

And so with regard to prayer for things we feel to be good in themselves. It is our ignorance of God that makes us think it more presumptuous to expect to get anything from God in answer to prayer, than to expect to obtain blessings in the ordinary way of His providence. We have not discerned the love of God in the means which He has given us of obtaining these blessings ; we have not seen His hand in those things which He has given us without our asking. Had we done so we should be ready to argue thus :—if it is after the manner of God to bestow liberally when we are not making request, in order to draw our hearts to Him, then surely it is according to the same desire, that He should authorise us to make request and confidently to expect the good for which we are allowed to ask.

If we judged without considering man's evil heart, we should think it far more delightful to feel ourselves encompassed by the arms of love than to feel ourselves under "laws of nature." It would be so were it not for the pride of our hearts. But pride can dwell in the midst of laws of nature, in which there is no soul, no love : it cannot dwell in the presence of a living God. A man who sees his talents and opportunities and all his circumstances as something in the midst of which he is placed to make the most of things for his own glory, feels comfortable among laws of nature of which he can take advantage, so to speak, by reason of his wisdom ; but a man cannot meet God in every event, coming near to him in condescending and protecting love, and not be humbled. Therefore the proud heart of man draws back from the statement that God is love ; and thus the love of God proves a repulsive doctrine when brought out in its true meaning, and when men are made to see that this love is testified to them in everything, and that it demands everything from them in return.

FAITH AND HOPE.

WE are saved by hope. Seeing that everything is included in being saved, we must be prepared to regard the meaning of this word as one of the most interesting subjects which can engage our attention.

What is Hope? It is simply the expectation of some future good. Nothing more than this is necessarily implied in the word. Hope is generally conceived of as implying uncertainty, as if to say, "I hope for a thing," were to say, I look for it doubtfully, I expect it in a measure, but I am not sure of it. But it is not so. When the Apostle says "We hope for that we see not," he puts hope and present vision in contrast; not certainty and uncertainty, but things seen and things not seen: and that no idea of uncertainty is implied is plain from what follows, "If we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it," expressing the peaceful calm security in which we wait. How is it then that Hope should have come to be associated with uncertainty?

There is another word in Scripture—"Faith"—which is of equal importance, for it is said "We are saved by Faith,"—with which the idea of uncertainty has also been associated. Faith is the belief of some statement made, and is therefore not necessarily uncertain any more than Hope. But the principle upon which they are both often conceived of as involving uncertainty is the same, and it is this:—from our cradles we walk by Faith and Hope; all our exertions, all our plans, involve both; but the faith and hope of the natural man proceed on probable evidence, rest on probable grounds, and in consequence are attended with uncertainty. Every day we are obliged to act on grounds not absolutely certain, upon presumptive evidence: and thus we have come to regard the expression "I believe it " as almost the same with " I am not sure of it;" for when the materials of our judgment, the means of knowledge we possess, are in their nature uncertain, it is obvious that our faith must partake of that uncertainty. In like manner the hope of men often rests on uncertainties. I hope to see a friend to-morrow, but I cannot be certain of it. Every human hope is uncertain, because of the instability of the things around us. No wonder that people accustomed thus to see faith and hope doubtfully applied, should have associated uncertainty with the very words. But observe, the uncertainty is in that on which the faith or hope rests: if we get a sure ground on which to rest, there is no longer any cause for uncertainty. Faith and hope in religion have reference to the words of God, and these are sure and steadfast; there is therefore no reason why the hope or faith should be uncertain.

But it is not so much to the nature of Hope that I am anxious to direct your attention, as to the object to which Christian hope is supposed to refer.

The hope of the Christian is often supposed to be, that he himself has a personal interest in the blood of Christ : that is the fact to which the hope refers, whether certain or uncertain ; whether a full assurance or merely a presumption. But hope has reference to a future thing, not to that which is present or past ; and it is confounding the objects of faith with those of hope to make what Christ has done an object of hope. What then is the object of hope ? It must be something which God has yet to do. I will refer you to a few of the many passages of Scripture in which hope is spoken of.—1 Peter, i. 3, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ . . . which hath begotten us to a lively (or life-giving) hope, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith." Again St. John says, "We know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is ; and every one that hath this hope in Him purifieth himself"—referring the purity of the believer to this hope. Again we find in the Epistle to the Hebrews chap. x., the power to overcome evil ascribed to hope. "Call to remembrance the former days in which . . . ye endured a great fight of affliction . . . ye took joyfully the spoiling of your goods—knowing that ye have in heaven a better and enduring substance." This was their hope. The object of hope then is a future manifestation of God, some completing of the plan of God in Christ: this, and not my own present personal interest in Christ, is the object of Christian hope.

But why am I so anxious to make a broad distinction between faith in the fact of my interest in Christ, and the hope for the future which springs from that fact? Because the moment I see that God is not now imputing sin to me, that moment my joy springs from the same source from which God's own joy springs. If the object of my hope is that I shall be saved in the great day of judgment, then the object of my attention, my present labour and exertion is to ascertain my safety; and all the graces of the divine character—the love, the holiness, the righteousness, the truth of God; all those rays which together make up the sum of the glory of the Son of God, I am anxious to discover in myself mainly in order to find out the answer to the question Am I safe? But this is not all. If a man comes direct to the Cross of Christ and in faith apprehends what is there set forth, taking it on God's word that it is all for him, then he starts free to examine into the meaning of the blood of Christ, and so goes on from one degree of knowledge to another as to the work of God in Christ. But, if instead of simply apprehending that what Christ has done is done for all, there be a previous personal question of the deepest interest: Has that blood been shed for me? it is plain that I shall be kept debating and inquiring on this side of the cross, so to speak, and shall not go on to know the cross itself; and this is the secret why such a statement as Christ shed His blood for sin can be heard again and again with so little emotion.

People have taken for granted that they know what Christ has done, but think that the question still remains, How are we to become personally interested in what He has done? and hence they do not live under the awful sense of having been bought with such a price. When a man knows that an interest in Christ is already given to him freely, in so much that nothing can make it more fully his than it is already; that after a thousand years' walking with God he could have no other ground of confidence in coming to God than he has at this moment, he is set free from all selfish reference to any good thing in himself: he has got a discovery of God's love which reconciles him to God, and makes him to be of one mind with God: and the consequence is that he feels Christ to be precious because He saves His people from their sins. And therefore while patiently waiting for the glory which is to be revealed, he occupies the present time as a man to whom that hope is dear, whose heart will be fully satisfied only when God's object is fully accomplished. Is it too much to say of this man that his hope is purifying him ; that he is righteous as Christ was righteous ; and that while his ground of peace is the work of Christ in the flesh, the effect of this peace is the imparting to him the very character which was in Christ Jesus?

There is a great difference between desire for Christ and desire for an interest in Christ. The Christian is one whose heart is captivated with the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ : he who merely desires an interest in Christ is one whose selfishness has been transferred from temporal things to eternal things ; and the attempt to identify this desire for something which is sought, not as an end, but merely as the condition of safety, with the Christian's desire for communion with God is a daring attempt to forge the true coin of Christ's Kingdom.

The great question is this—Has the work of Christ put you into a condition in which it is reasonable to say to you Repent and give God glory, or has it not? Is it right to tell you to pray—to draw near to God? Unquestionably the sinner with unatoned guilt on his head has no title to come to God. People fancy they may pray without presupposing an interest in Christ, but this is denying the necessity for a Mediator. If you have courage to draw near to God before you know whether the barrier is removed or not you are making sin a very light matter. God, who teaches us that our sins have erected a barrier, also teaches that the blood of Jesus has removed the barrier; and therefore He says, Come unto Me.

PRAYER.

MEN are tempted to think that there cannot be anything really left dependent on them in any great event which God desires to accomplish; that the objects which have a place in God's counsels are things which they should reverently adore and devoutly contemplate, but with the bringing to pass of which they have nothing to do. In point of fact it is quite otherwise. These objects are to be brought about through our prayers, and if we give not ourselves to prayer we are justly condemned of God as drawing back from the part assigned to us. It is laid on us who are of the light and of the day, who know the condition of men and their true interests, the evil state of men as they are by nature and the good condition to which they are called in the Gospel, that we offer supplications, prayers, intercession and giving of thanks for them, that we seek for them that which we know to be good, and bless God for His goodness to them; seeking for them that which we know they need, whether they themselves are seeking for it or not; acknowledging on their account that for which we know them to be debtors to God, whether they acknowledge themselves to be debtors or not.

But having our minds occupied with the condition of others, and desiring good for others according to what we know of their interests, is not necessarily prayer. Prayer implies that we feel this good thing to be within the reach of our supplications: that we not only desire it for them, but that we ask it for them, from One who is able and willing to bestow it; however fervently we desire a thing there is no real prayer beyond the real faith in God that He will grant it. It is one explanation of the fact that people think they pray much when they really do not pray at all, that all earnest pleading is conceived to be prayer ; that feeling the importance of a thing, and being anxious to receive it, and earnestly soliciting God to give it, is prayer. When we come asking good things doubtfully, however earnestly, we are not giving God glory ; when we come to Him with earnest desire only but not expectation, we are withholding glory. It is no testimony from us to God's goodness that we are anxious to receive a good thing ; but it is a testimony to His goodness that we will trust Him to give it. To say that we are earnest in our prayer is just to say that we conceive ourselves good ; in being earnest, people think they have done their part, and that they have manifested a right feeling when they have asked a thing sincerely and pleaded hard for it. But observe, their earnestness proves only something about themselves and their own choice of good things, not any confidence in God's goodness or love. Prayer is the offering our desires to God for things according to His will ; and our concluding with the word 'Amen!' is understood to express our confidence that God both hears our prayers and will answer them. Whatever God has revealed to us as a subject for prayer He has placed within our reach. To ask God for a thing, not believing that He is willing to give it, is not to go on God's promise but on a venture.

The ground on which we are commanded to pray for all men is, that "this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour;" and we are further taught that this prayer for others is a condition of our minds over which God rejoices. Our meditating on God's character, our admiring what we are taught to believe of Him, is recognised as a reality, when we prove that we do in truth believe Him by taking Him at His word. People are apt to reason that if God 'willeth all men to be saved' they must be saved whether we pray or not; but if we reason thus there is no space for prayer at all, we come to the conclusion that it is our part to stand by and leave God to fulfil

His own counsel. It is manifest here, however, that the 'will' in God is a will which is to move our prayer; it cannot therefore be a determined counsel fixing the fact that all men shall be saved, for the willingness in God that all men should be saved is presented as the ground for prayer. It is indeed a mystery that God should have a will to the salvation of every one, and yet that He should lay it on men themselves to pray, so that their prayers shall intervene between His will and its accomplishment. It seems that God would have us pray on the understanding that His willingness does not of itself secure the result; although it is the ground on which we may trust Him for the result, and that only in our trusting Him is the result secured.

This is a deep mystery, but it is in harmony with the whole scheme according to which Christ came to suffer, the just for the unjust. Intercession is part of that great scheme of God, the root and principle of which is that God sends forth His own holiness and love to dwell in human nature in this world of sin and misery, so connected with that sin and misery as to be affected and agonized by the sight, and moved to prayer by the feeling of that agony; enduring a grievous burden because of the evil, and so stirred up to come to God and plead with Him that He would remove the evil. It is one fulfilling of the great purpose of God to make His own love come into the world where there is no love—there to feel poor and needy because of the absence of all that love can delight in; there to be grieved and agonized because of the apprehension and sense of what the world is; and thence to call upon God, as from the deep pit and miry clay, that He would come and destroy the evil, and cause light to arise out of darkness, and life out of death.

To me it appears that, unless the interference of God on behalf of man had thus been made the answer to the prayers of a holy longing, the righteous character of that interference would not have been proved. When we see in Christ love moved by the evil around it, by prayer laying hold of God's strength for the accomplishment of all its holy and gracious desires; and then contemplate God as the hearer and answerer of these prayers, we learn what it is that moves the eternal Father; what cry it is which will find a response in His bosom—the cry of righteousness; the cry for that which is truly good. It is a part of this great scheme that we should fill up what is behind of the sufferings of Christ; that Christ should in the members of His body be exposed to the same sorrows, be moved to the same prayers and pleadings which He offered in the days of His flesh: and this is properly our place who are called to be filled with the Spirit of Christ; that in us His Spirit should make intercession for the evil that is in man.

Let there be in us the knowledge of God's mind revealed in Christ, seeing in Him what are the yearnings of God's heart over sinners: and in the strength of Christ let us be holding what we see as living truth, realizing it through the possession of the mind which was in Christ;

and it will necessarily follow that what in God comes forth as the yearning of love over men, will return from us to God in the shape of prayer for them; that receiving from the heart of God through Christ, by the Spirit, God's own yearnings, we shall be found sending them back to God in prayers and intercessions according to His will.

To know God simply as an absolute sovereign, bowing to His doings merely because they are His, receiving His commands merely because He commands, this is not to know God as a fountain of life. Unless the character of God, and not merely the fact that there is a God, be apprehended, there is nothing known of God upon which the soul can feed. See then what a fresh well-spring of life it is, that this is the very truth concerning God, that "He willeth all men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of the truth;" that as God is good, He delights in men's deliverance from evil; as He is holy, He delights in men's deliverance from sin; as He is true,

He delights in men's deliverance from unbelief and ignorance and belief of a lie, for all unbelief is the belief of a lie: and thus, just because God is good and holy and true, it is necessarily the fact that He will have all men to be saved, to become holy and true, to be brought out of darkness into His marvellous light. I speak to those who have in a measure realized the will of God towards them; who have come to feel that there is revealed to them from God in Christ something in which they may safely trust: and I beseech them to realize what a different thing it is to admit in words the fact of God's love to all, from what it is to dwell in the vision of this love. People who live among speculations may be satisfied with the clearness of their conclusions: what we have to do with is the living God, the present heart and mind of that living God: and the work of faith is the work of abiding in the consciousness of the reality of what we believe; and therefore the continual presence of the Spirit of God in us is needful to that work.

Unless we see the love of God resting on men we cannot realize what they are called to become, what may be their condition. When we see and know God as loving every human being, we know what that fountain of love is out of which they might be drinking, although as yet they refuse to drink; and therefore, in estimating what would be their condition were they changed, we have this love, which is about them and upon them, teaching us what is needed for them, even the knowledge of the love.

But what would be our situation if we were simply in the secret of this loving aspect of God towards men, and God had not appointed the ordinance of prayer? We should see in the case of every unconverted person a gap, a space, between two hearts—the heart of God and that of His rebellious creature,—and we should feel a longing desire to have this distance removed; and yet we could do nothing with the removal of it, but must just look on in helpless mourning over it. And now we come to the fact that it is good and acceptable with God that we pray that the barrier over which we must needs mourn may be removed; that we ask of God that the ignorance and consequent distrust of God which is in our brother may cease, and that so—no longer mere spectators of a painful spectacle—we give ourselves, in the strength of the Holy Spirit, to exercise faith in God in respect of this evil thing, seeking that it be changed. You know that when Christ is spoken of as being all that the Father delighteth in, His intercession is mentioned. “He was numbered with the transgressors, and He bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors.” This intercession, this pleading for the transgressors, is part of the excellence of the Lord Jesus; and the same thing is here said to be good and acceptable in the sight of God when He finds it in us, the members of the body of Christ.

Delighting in the good, and knowing that power belongeth to God, and that to Him also belongeth mercy, there should be no faint-heartedness. There can be no consciousness of helplessness in the longings and yearnings of love, so long as we know and realize that God is love. We are in fact making ourselves better than God when we say 'Were we God, this good thing would be done, but because we are not God it cannot be done.' We should realize that there is no goodness in us which does not come from God as a fountain, and no desire which God has taught us to cherish with which we may not come back to God Himself, and, having received it as an inspiration from Him, may not breathe it back in believing prayer. This is our calling, that we confer not with flesh and blood, but rise up out of all surrounding circumstances into the heart and mind of God ; and, dwelling there, realize His will that none should perish, but that all should come to the knowledge of the truth and be saved ; and so be strengthened to breathe forth into the ear of God those longings of holy love which He Himself has put within us. This is our place, that we yield ourselves to the Spirit, to be agonized with Christ's agonies because of the sins of men—to be filled with Christ's longing for their salvation. In this way the living Head is to be multiplied in all His members, and a voice is to ascend from the whole body interceding with God.

If you confer with flesh and blood as to this matter, all I have said will go for nothing; countless suggestions from your own hearts will destroy its power: but I say again, stand on the word and truth of God, be consistent, pray not at all or pray according to the revelation of God's word. If you believe you will get any thing for the asking, where is the limit? How can you draw a line of distinction between the things God teaches you to desire? Therefore either give up prayer altogether, or pray as to that God who will have prayers, intercession and giving of thanks to be made for all men. The work of faith is the abiding in God and coming to Him in faith, and praying in the power of faith. Therefore be not satisfied with uttering wishes before God, but pray in faith—in expectation ; do not conceive yourselves to be praying at all, unless you are laying hold of God's willingness in the matter and trusting it. Any one who has known what it is to exercise this faith, knows that it is quite different from holding the true doctrine on the subject ; so that while holding the true doctrine during the whole day, it may be that only during one minute of that day you have been working the work of faith.

And now I ask you individually how far you have acted on the truth of God's willingness to hear and answer prayer ? How far have you realized the importance of your own special place as an intercessor, and your responsibility as to the souls of others who are perishing for lack of knowledge ? What proportion of your time have you distinctly given, as in the sight of God, to the work of drawing down blessings on others, in the faith that this is the appointed way of being a blessing to your fellow-men ? If a person bestows a great proportion of his time in conversing with others, or in writing to them, or in any way declaring to them the truth, apart from this looking to God and expecting from Him the increase, is he giving acknowledgment to this ordinance of prayer?

Again, to what extent have the seasons set apart for prayer been occupied with prayer. Take away first the words that were used almost without thought, then those which represented thoughts, but which were rather meditations than prayer—then take away those petitions which were not accompanied with expectation—with the faith that they would be received, and what remains to be set down as real prayer—that prayer which has the promise—the prayer which connects its own answer with God's faithfulness, so that the one is the assurance of the other?

ARE NOT MY WAYS EQUAL?

“THEREFORE, O thou son of man, speak unto the house of Israel, thus ye speak saying, If our transgressions and our sins be upon us, and we pine away in them, how should we then live? Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live.”*

There is a oneness in the excuses of the evil heart of unbelief at all times: therefore has God caused His dealings with the Jews of old to be recorded for our instruction; and therefore has the record of what they said in their hearts and among themselves been preserved for us, that we might know what the Lord's true answer is to that secret feeling by which men cast the blame of their sin on their God.

For what was it to say, "If our transgressions and our sins be upon us, and we pine away in them, how should we then live?" but to regard their sins and transgressions as something that was in them, in such a way as that there was no remedy; and is not this the very same feeling which men now express when they say that their condition is such that they cannot believe in the word of their God or meet His requirements; when they say with regard to their unbelief that they cannot help it; and when they find an apology for what is amiss in their outward conduct in the evil state of their hearts, which evil state they regard rather as their misfortune than their fault?

The language here ascribed to the children of Israel is language with which your own hearts are quite familiar. And, put into the simplest form of words it amounts to this, 'If we be sinners, how should we be holy?' Examine yourselves, I pray you, and see if, in respect of everything in your hearts which you are conscious is not what it ought to be, you have ever found any better apology than simply the fact that so it is.

You say the evil is natural to you, and so in a sense it is ; but in another sense it is not natural. The only sense in which it can be called natural is as being the fact : but it is not natural in as much as it is not according to man's original creation by God ; and it is not natural in that you are still under no necessity to sin. My dear friends, you ought to be conscious of being detected, as in the act of sin, with regard to such habitual excuses for sin, when you find condemnation attached by the Holy Ghost to the very same kind of excuse in the mouth of the Jews. You must see that your reasonings and your excuses are no new thing, when you recognise that the very same excuses are charged upon the children of Israel by God Himself as sin. It matters not whether you call your disobedience transgression or unbelief ; so long as you reason yourselves into the opinion that there is something in your condition which excuses your not meeting the will of your God, you are deceiving your own souls. The sinners reproved by the Prophet were not denying that they were sinners. They only asked, 'how can we live?'

There is not one amongst us who denies that he is a sinner; not one of those who are not rejoicing in the love of God in Christ, who is not ready to say, 'I know it is my own unbelief.' No one has any difficulty in confessing that it is a great loss to himself that he is not what he wishes to be. But, you say, 'We cannot help it:' if our transgressions are upon us, and we pine away in them, how can we live? My dear friends, I do not say that you can live in such a state; but the question is, must you continue in that state? The question is not whether a person continuing under the power of sin can live; but whether you, as individuals, can live—that is, come out of your evil state and live; not continue in your evil state and live, but come out of it and so live; and my statement is, that in supposing yourselves to be under some necessity by which you are constrained to go on as you are and to be as you are, you are under a delusion. There is delusion in feeling that there is any obstacle to your being changed,—that there is any reason why you should continue as you are.

Observe, it is declared that there is no will in God for the destruction of the wicked, but that there is a will in God for their salvation. "Turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O House of Israel?" God calls on them to turn because of His will that they should turn, and asks them why they should die? inasmuch as there was no necessity for this, from anything they could possibly see in God. As if God had said, "I cannot tell why you should die: I have no reason why you should die; I ask yourselves, why you should die? If the reason does not come from yourselves, it shall not come from Me."

However people may in words ascribe to God holiness and goodness and truth and mercy, they are uttering vain idle compliments unless they in their hearts believe that God 'willeth not the death of a sinner.' Unless they believe this, I care not though they call God good. They call Him so in words, but deny it in substance. I care not though they call God love. It is but an empty word in their lips while they exalt His sovereignty at the expense of His moral character, doing away, in fact, with His moral character altogether; speaking of His doing what He pleases, in a way that seems to imply that good and evil are alike indifferent to Him.

I would have you mark how very different God's way of vindicating Himself is from that which men have taken, in their mistaken zeal for His glory. The principle according to which there was no reason why they should die is here stated, and it is this: that "if the wicked restore the pledge, give again that he had robbed, walk in the statutes of life without committing iniquity, he shall surely live." By this statement it appears that God deals with all on the same fair, and just, and righteous ground; that it is not men but character that God looks to—that it is not the individual but the state which He considers; that God is no respecter of persons, and that no one can truly say that his perishing in his sins is the doing of the Lord.

The Jews had said, 'The way of the Lord is not equal.' The Lord testifies by His Prophet that their way was not equal, but that His way was equal. They had said that the Lord showed kindness to some and unkindness to others, not on any principle of righteousness, but arbitrarily. The answer virtually is, God has never said of such and such persons by their names that they shall be blessed, and of such and such that they shall be cursed; God has not chosen people out in that way: but He has testified that His pleasure in the righteous is in their righteousness, so that, if they depart and do wickedly they shall die; and that in like manner if the wicked turn from their wickedness they shall live.

But the whole of this passage must be unintelligible unless you understand what 'righteousness' is, and what 'wickedness' is. You may, indeed, know this much :—that it is those who are in a certain condition of character who are safe, and it is those who are in another condition of character who are exposed to wrath. This you may see on the surface of the repeated statements we have considered ; but it is another thing to understand what God means when He speaks of righteousness, and what He means when He speaks of wickedness. If you mean one thing by these words and God another, you are not understanding God, and cannot receive His instructions. Our Lord recognises the oneness of God's law when He says, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength, and thy neighbour as thyself." When elsewhere He says, "This is the commandment of God, that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent"—it may appear as if there were some difference ; but there is none, for love to God and faith in Christ are in reality one. God is not changing the principle of His government, at one time telling us to love, and at another to believe. When He requires faith in Christ He is not recalling the command to love. but in point of fact saying, I call on you to believe, as that which is necessary to enable you to love. Righteousness is delight in God, joy in God. It is a mistake to separate between these, and to hold that a man must first be righteous and then he is entitled to delight in God—that he must first be good, and then he may have confidence in God. The fact is that there is no true goodness except in rejoicing in the good God ; no true holiness except in the devotedness of the heart to our reconciled Father ; no true love except that which is the reflection of the love of God in Christ to us, we loving Him because He first loved us. It is utterly useless to call upon you to be righteous, unless you know that when God complains of your not being righteous, the thing of which He complains is that your hearts are not delighting in Him who made you, and that when God calls on you to believe in Christ, the thing you are required to believe is a thing fitted to make you delight in Him who made you. Righteousness in man is dwelling in the light of that love which God bestows upon him without money and without price. This is to give God glory; this is to have the mind of Christ; and for this God has in Christ made provision for all men. He has said, "Let my captives go without money and without price." He who led captivity captive, overcame for them; conquered for them that He might conquer in them. All is contained in the gift of Christ.

THE BLESSING AND THE CURSE.

“THUS saith the Lord. There is one Lord and His Name is One.” There is one God, who is above all, and through all, and in all, to whom belongeth the glory for ever and ever.*

My dear friends, I beseech you not to think that you have no occasion to be told that there is but one God. The heart of man is still the heart of that fool who said, There is no God. You or I, in so far as we speak according to our natural hearts, according to the desires of the flesh and of the mind, still say that we shall be as gods, and that none shall reign over us. I therefore entreat of you—seeing it is not a thing you will easily do, or do as a matter of course—I entreat of you that you would acknowledge that there is but one God. Dream not that you are at the mercy of chance and accident, of creatures or of fate ; but remember, that there is a God. Oh, it is a blessed word that there is a God; and that it is not left for good and evil to contend together for ever, striving for the mastery; that there is a God who reigneth in Heaven, and who considereth the things that are done on earth; who has counsels and thoughts in His heart which shall stand to all generations; and who assuredly will bring to pass the desire of those who trust and fear Him. This God has said "Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord."

This is the only word for God to speak. God has never said—He never will say—that there is a blessing for any one away from Himself; He will not encourage His creatures to trust in something else than Himself. It is not His will that any creature, any earthly brother, or any earthly substance should be our trust, for He would not have us deceived in our trust; and so we are further warned concerning the man who trusteth in man that "He shall be like the heath in the desert, and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land, and not inhabited."

There is then a "good that cometh." There are good things now, in respect of which there is a continual fulfilment of this word—from day to day and from hour to hour. It is not the mere prospect of good which is held out to us. It is a present enjoyment, a present joy to which we are called. Now there cometh good continually; and every word which cometh from God speaking of God,—everything that is a testimony from God, whether an event of His providence, or a manifestation of His Spirit,—everything that comes forth from God, showing us God, comes as a good. To every such good, the man who is making flesh his arm is blind. It comes as no good to him. The very Gospel makes him unhappy. He has no heart for it. The very setting forth of God's love disturbs his peace: the more you dwell on the freeness and all-sufficiency of Christ's salvation, the more uncomfortable you make him. He has no eye to see the good that cometh in your words, and so in the midst of plenty he starveth; in the midst of the refreshing showers of God's grace and love he is in the desert—in a parched land and not inhabited.

“Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is: for he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit.”

I ask you to look at the picture here set before you—a man trusting in God, and whose hope God is; one who has a heart to feel; having various affections; formed not to be indifferent to anything going on about him, but to be affected by all; not a stock nor a stone, but a feeling, thinking, living man,—a man conscious of being continually exposed either to have pain inflicted on him or to receive pleasure; who yet is not looking with fear on any of the visible things by which he has been wounded, nor with hope to any of the visible things which have given him pleasure; but who in spite of the associations of experience is, as regards his own prospects, looking simply and directly to God.

I beseech you consider this man. He understands that such and such things can create pain, for he has felt pain from them; that such and such treatment can cause grief, for he has been grieved by it; that such and such other things can create pleasure, for he has had pleasure in them: he knows as matter of experience that such power has been in these things in time past, and therefore, that it may be in them in time to come. But when it was in them in time past, he knows that it was God who put it in them—yea, that the power was of God alone: and therefore, in all his expectations, he looks not to the things, but to God Himself.

Oh my friends, would that we knew the glory which such a one is giving to God!—the worship, the living worship, which such a trust contains. Nothing less than this is the perfect acknowledgment of God. And I wish you to see the difference between the man who, surrounded by circumstances which touch him at every point, and affect him in a thousand ways, is continually balancing them with each other, and thinking how they will work, and the man who, equally surrounded by these things and equally sensitive to them, is not dependent on them at all, but is looking upward and thinking of God.

“And whose hope the Lord is.” This shows us that all the happiness of man must be of the nature of hope. It is not according to the will of God, nor is it according to our own nature, to say ‘this moment belongs to us and we know nothing of that which is to come.’ We are created to look forward; we are formed to know that there is a Being who governs us, that there is a plan evolving, and that there are things yet to come to pass which are important to us. And therefore when we trust God it is a trust for something yet to come. It is a present trust and a present joy, but it is also a hope. The present is always passing away before we have well felt it—it is always slipping from beneath us; but the thing men look to is futurity; and this is the condition of the man who trusts in God, that his hope is the Lord.

Observe what this means. It is not merely that this man does not live to present things, neither does he live to future things: he does not look to circumstances present or future, but to God. That is the only real confidence. To think that there is anything sure or steadfast except God is to believe a lie. The earth is not permanent under our feet; the sun is not permanent in the firmament. There has been a time when things were not as they are; and a time cometh when it will be said, 'Behold, I make all things new.' Nothing is stable in itself but the mind of God; but we, when trusting in the flesh, think that all things about us have more or less a firmness,

Now the man, here pronounced blessed, not merely as to the present but in regard to all futurity, has to do with God Himself. The reason of his hope is, that 'such is God : ' not such and such are his friends, his circumstances and his possessions ; but such is the character of the Lord God.

It is further said of this man "He shall be like a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her root by the river ;" that river is the goodwill, the love of God. As the mind of God comes forth in God's actions, he is continually receiving from the waters of this river. The picture sets before us a tree planted by a running stream, receiving continual nourishment from the water of the stream, so as to be made independent of the vicissitudes of the weather, compared with a tree which by long continuance of drought is parched and withered. The one depends on the weather for the sap which nourishes it, the other does not : this is a picture of the difference between the man whose happiness depends upon ever-changing circumstances, and he whose blessedness is derived from the unchanging God. And our God, who calls us to live by the ever-flowing stream of His own love, calls us to know that love in the greatness of the calling wherewith He hath called us, that we should be heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." To call us to such a hope is indeed after the manner of the love which the Father hath bestowed upon us. We have not seen Christ; and though we may have some faint notion what it is to be like Him in whom the glories of the Eternal Godhead shine forth in human nature: yet how faint it must be. But we know, that when He appears, we shall be like Him. Therefore the thing in store for us is this: this is the blessing, whatever it means; even all that is in these words, "heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ,"—a higher portion assuredly than belongs to the angelic hosts, the highest bliss of created beings.

And of this inheritance we have now an earnest. Though "eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him," yet are they revealed to us by the Spirit, when the Spirit taketh of the things which are Christ's, and showeth them unto us, and enableth us to dwell in heavenly places in Christ Jesus.

AN EXPOSITION OF 2 PETER I. 5-11.

THE Apostle had set forth in the previous verses the great doctrine that God has given to us in Christ Jesus all things pertaining to life and godliness, and that the form in which this is given is that of exceeding great and precious promises; in order that by these we should be partakers of the divine nature. After having set forth the things revealed in Christ, he considers how it is, in what particular condition of living it is, that we become partakers of these. The fulness that is in Christ is one thing; the actual enjoyment of that fulness by me personally is another. The 5th, 6th, and 7th verses contain an exhortation given by the Apostle, in the knowledge that in complying with it we shall be receiving of that fulness; that obedience to the exhortation is the condition in which the fulness which is in Christ flows into us.

"Giving all diligence." The first thing on which he fixes our attention is this, that the Christian life is an active life,—one which contains in it a continual call for watchfulness and activity. It is not a condition of mere repose or of simple receiving; but there will be a continued activity connected with that receiving. A demand upon the whole man, upon the whole time of the whole man, is implied in the word "all," "giving all diligence."

"Add to your faith virtue."

The person exhorted is supposed to be 'in the faith'—believing the promises, seeing them to be the true sayings of God, and contemplating them as realities. Being in this condition, he is called upon to add to his faith "virtue;" that is, resoluteness. Add to the faith of the promises a firm purpose, to live according to that which you are believing. Let the knowledge of the things which God has revealed take in your minds the shape of a determined purpose to be conformed to what you know.

Resolutions, simply as such, are most fallacious; and the expectation of accomplishing anything in the strength of resolutions will always deceive us. But still our purpose of serving God's will, to be accomplished in God's strength, is to be a purpose; and there is to be in it a boldness, a courageous boldness. 'Virtue' involves the bringing before ourselves, and realising to ourselves, great hindrances in the way of our living according to the truth of God; and implies a readiness to count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus. It is not a mere resolution; but a resoluteness which implies the encountering, the intentional encountering of difficulty.

Add to "virtue knowledge."

Faith implies knowledge, but the knowledge we are to add after we have faith and whilst cherishing virtue, cannot be the same thing with what was at first revealed to our faith. By "knowledge" is here meant being in light as to the details of the Christian life. There is to be a painstaking to know these details in connection with our own circumstances; not merely a vague general determination to encounter whatever may be before us.

Add to "knowledge temperance."

The next thing necessary to our serving God, after being advanced in knowledge, is self-denial.

Temperance is the controlling and restraining of the natural man. By temperance I do not understand simply that we should avoid what is in itself evil, but also that we should be contented to give up some things which are in themselves not evil; for instance, the love of father, mother, sister or child, and many other things in themselves right, from which notwithstanding we are to keep ourselves loose and disengaged, as feeling that there is another and a higher call upon us.

When God would have us to serve Him and to offer to Him the reasonable sacrifice of a life devoted to Him, He is not merely teaching us to distinguish between things good and evil, but to distinguish among things that are good ; He is teaching us the subordination of some things to other things, that we may choose among them and give the right place to the highest—that we may make up our minds not to live to ourselves in any thing which God has given us ; but ever to hear a higher call upon us than that of mere enjoyment, and ever be ready to meet that call.

“And to temperance patience.”

It is here implied that the Christian will have not only to act and to surrender but to endure. We are warned against expecting any exemption from the appointment of God that man must suffer. We cannot serve God in this dark day, which is the hour and power of darkness, unless we add patience to our temperance ; unless we be content not only to deny ourselves but to endure actual suffering.

“And to patience godliness.”

My dear friends, if this were an enumeration of things to be added to each other after a lapse of time, taking up a series of days and hours, then it would follow that godliness was removed to a considerable distance, in point of time, from faith. But you are not thus to conceive of the Apostle's teaching; he enumerates these things one after another in order that our minds may discriminate and rightly know them. You are not to think of them as successive stages in your progress, like so many mile-stones on the road. It is not that after cultivating one of these characteristics of the divine life, you are to go on to another; but that this is the order in which they are connected; the one leading to and increasing the other.

What is godliness? Godliness is the living to God in anything, it matters not what. And we are here taught that it is when we are cherishing patience, patiently enduring any painful thing that comes from God, that we shall see God in that thing. The impatient man is continually in ignorance of that 'secret of the Lord' which is in everything which comes from the Lord; while the patient man will with open face see God in all things. The event which calls for patience, if it produce irritation and dissatisfaction ; if the person feel as if it were an evil which he desires to be quit of, will never speak to him of God : but if in the details of Christian experience he possess his soul in patience—if he be peacefully waiting and contemplating God's acting in it all, then is he adding to his patience godliness.

We lose the benefit of our patience, unless patience becomes a step to godliness. It is impossible to be godly without being patient ; but it is quite possible to be patient without being godly : and the thing here taught is, that we are not to regard knowledge, temperance, and patience as the great things which God desires to see in us, but to know that these are to be cherished chiefly because they are the atmosphere in which godliness can exist. We are to value them, not so much for their own sake, as because while thus dwelling in the knowledge of what God calls us to ; while thus resolute, self-denying, and patient, we can rise up to God from the midst of outward circumstances which but for these things would shut out God. By adding patience, temperance, and knowledge, and boldness to the faith of God's promises, we get quit, as it were, of all the outward things which form impediments to our enjoying God. If we are brought into the experience of what is here described, then we have created for ourselves, so to speak, a transparency in all things, so that through them we can see God and can perceive that no situation contains in itself any real reason why we should not in it give glory to God, and rejoice in Him. There are indeed many situations which tend to prevent our rejoicing in God, because they have in them a tendency to shut out God ; but our patience and our temperance and our knowledge and resolution will neutralize this evil, and in the midst of such circumstances we shall thus be prepared to glorify and to rejoice in God.

"To patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness." Mark the arrangement here. It is not said, add to patience brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness godliness ;

but 'add to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness;' teaching us that it is when we mount up out of our circumstances to God, that we are in a condition to descend again upon our brethren of men, in the spirit of love; that it is when we see God in all things that we can exercise brotherly kindness. Just conceive the case of one who through patient endurance of hostility is enabled peacefully to ascend to God; what is the result of his so ascending? It is that he sees those who have injured him in the light of God's forgiveness, of God's forbearance; he sees the love of God towards them unquenched by all that tends to quench it; and thus raised up to God he is prepared to descend upon them with the very mind and feeling of God. Still the Apostle does not leave this to be a matter of course, but makes it an injunction; and whenever a command is given we are to know that a command is needed. And we see why the command was needed here. It is quite possible to have so ascended up to God, and yet not actually so to come down in love to our brethren ; therefore the Apostle says, you are not to be satisfied with contemplating the love wherewith God regards man, but to know that God demands of you that same love to man. To be in circumstances in which a right feeling ought next to follow, and that that feeling should actually follow are different things ; and therefore the Apostle says, be not satisfied with entering into the mind of God, in His thoughts for man ; but be partakers in those thoughts, and look yourselves upon your fellow-men in brotherly kindness.

“And to brotherly kindness, charity.”

Mark, I entreat you, that I am not making distinctions where God has not made them. What is meant by godliness is not simply love to God : it is the acknowledgment of Him as God ; it is seeing His sovereignty—it is seeing that He is God. And thus brotherly kindness is not simply love to men. It is the peculiar character which love takes from the circumstance that they are my brethren. It is love springing from the acknowledgment of a bond.

When I have ascended to God and look to Him from whom are all, I feel what it is to be linked to all around me by a unity of nature and condition. This is properly speaking brotherly love, but it is not the same as charity; and I entreat you to mark that charity is given as the last thing.

“God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him.” While love to God in us will be godliness, and love to man in us will be brotherly love, there is a principle which is properly love itself; which has not the distinctive characters either of godliness or of brotherly kindness; which does not recognise in its object either superiority or equality, but is simply and purely love: and it is this which is placed last. It is up to this that we are brought by other things.

Not that they cease when this is reached; but that it exists along with them, and grows out from them, being in itself the participation in the divine nature. All the various ties by which God binds us together, have in them an appropriate love: but this love is above the love which a father bears to his child, a son to his father, a brother to his sister, a husband to his wife. Above all these is that comprehensive charity, which is higher than all; not contradicting the others, but comprehending them in itself.

This is our calling, to partake of that mind in God out of which creation sprang, and which is therefore before creation; out of which brotherly love arises, and which is therefore above and beyond brotherly love: that which, had there been no creation, no brethren, no relative connexions, could have originated all good things. Of course, like all the rest, it is in us a derived thing coming to us from God; but not the less is it intended to be in us.

Do not think it too much for you to expect to be able to distinguish, as St. Peter distinguished, between these conceptions of love. When we see the Apostles moving among the deep things of the Spirit as persons at home, and understanding what they speak of, we are not to say, 'They understand, but we cannot hope to understand, these distinctions.' Do not be satisfied with knowing that so many things are to be added to faith, without understanding exactly what is meant; but know rather that you are called to receive the same Spirit who enabled the Apostles so to write, knowing what they wrote, in order that you may read, and rightly understanding what you read, may glorify God in it.

“For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.”

My dear friends, mark how continually every word of instruction, admonition, and exhortation in the epistles, recognises the condition of living to God as the condition into which God desires to bring us, in giving us Christ; so that if that is not accomplished in any one nothing is accomplished. If these things be abounding in you, then is the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ bearing that fruit in you which it was intended to bear.

But more is here said than this. We are not merely taught that such is the fruit and such the result which God desires, but also that the way in which the knowledge of Christ becomes fruitful in us, is by our obeying this command. I know how easily men confound such an admonition as this with the mere advice to behave themselves well in all the relations of life. But remember how very spiritual these commands are, and how very much obedience to them belongs to the inward man. It is not that you are to add such and such outward deeds of conduct to your faith; that which is enjoined is altogether a spiritual and an inward thing. When this knowledge goes forth upon the inward man, moulding and fashioning and changing it, and creating us anew after the image of Christ—when beholding with open face, as in a glass, the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, we are changed into the same image from glory to glory by the Lord the Spirit—it is in this process that we are made to be “not barren or un-fruitful in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

“But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.”

The person who is in the faith is in the light. The Apostle had commanded them to add “these things” to their faith; and he now declares that if these things be not added to faith, faith is extinguished. It is not that faith continues, although the fruit is not there; but that faith is a living principle only whilst going forth in living power from the man; and that the resisting of this living power is the extinguishing of the life itself. There is an inseparable connection between our turning to practical account the vision of God’s promises, and our abiding in that vision; between our yielding to the influence of what God has revealed, and our abiding in the light of what He has revealed; between our resisting the influence of what God reveals, and our coming to be ignorant that He has revealed it. There is in our cherishing the knowledge and yielding ourselves to its power, that which keeps us in the knowledge; and there is in our disobedience to the light that which shuts it out, so that in fact it becomes darkness. It is not merely true that some men reject the light altogether, and therefore abide in darkness; but it is also true that the individual who has come to know the light may be, and often is found, in particular instances and in respect of particular light, resisting and rejecting it; and in so far as this resistance goes, he becomes blind and cannot see afar off. The person who is seeing the light, and turning it to account and profiting by it, receives at every step of the Christian life, additional light from God; while he who resists any light and refuses to walk in it, comes to be in darkness. This is true, not merely in regard to the great division of men into believers and unbelievers, but it is true of every particle of light which God gives us, and in respect of the use which those who have known God make of every light which God sets before them.

“And hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.”

To say that he is blind and cannot see afar off and to say that he has forgotten the purgation of his sins, is substantially the same thing; because it is in remembering that we are purged from our old sins that we dwell in the light. Therefore the person who is blind, not discerning the truth of things, not entering into the mind of God, is just the person who is not dwelling in the light of the cross of Christ, and who is not seeing things as they are revealed by the shedding of the blood of Christ. The glory of the cross is in this, that if we are beholding it, we are fruitful; if not, we are unfruitful. The glory of the cross does not consist in this, that a person who has once seen the cross shall be always fruitful, whether he be dwelling in the light that shines from it, or be shutting it out; but in this, that there is an inseparable connection between our being at any moment in the light of the character of God as revealed in the cross, and our living to the glory of God. That we may shut out this light, and cease to live to the glory of God, is true : but this interferes not with the glory of the cross ; for had we abode in the light of it, we should have lived to the glory of God.

And now the Apostle, having taught us that he who adds to his faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly-kindness and charity, will be fruitful, and that he who does not will be blind, warns us against being blind in these remarkable words ; “Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure ; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall. For so an entrance shall be administered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.”

This is an address to persons knowing their calling and election of God, and now in the condition of living to the glory of God. It is an exhortation to them to give diligence to make this condition steadfast, sure, permanent. It is not therefore a command to do something in order to be taken into the number of the elect, as it has sometimes been ignorantly held to mean.

“If ye do these things, ye shall never fall.”

I believe that just in the same way in which a person dead to the perception of God and His goodness, may lull himself into security by the thought that all is fixed; so, one who once rejoiced in the light of God's goodness, and had once escaped from “the corruption that is in the world,” may, at seasons, while forgetting the blood and the teaching of Christ, become “blind” again; and that while the reality of the divine life is, as it were, dead within him, yet the memory of his former experience may arise in such a shape as to give a feeling of security which is altogether carnal, and which becomes the cause of his continuing dead to God and to goodness. The preservative against such a state of things, is in the words “If ye do these things, ye shall never fall.” And that which such a man is taught to recall is not his former experience, but the fact that God is the same God now as He was then ; and his consolation is to come from recovering his sight and being made again to see afar off, through the power of Christ working in him. If any one takes comfort from the doctrine of the "perseverance of saints," when he himself is not living to the glory of God, it must be a delusion and a snare. To a man who is dwelling in the light, the knowledge that he may trust Christ with perfect confidence as to his continuing in the light, is not merely comfortable, but is absolutely needful to peace. Unless we could trust Christ with the future, at the time we are dwelling in the light, our joy in the light would be of short continuance ; and I believe that such trust for the future will be felt to be easily and naturally connected with this word, "if you do these things you will never fall ;" for in such a season the soul will be given up truly, into the hands of Christ, to have these things wrought in it.

It is very grievous to see any who have once rejoiced in the love and holiness of God, afterwards preserving some measure of peace, not from dwelling in the vision of God's love and holiness, but from the habit of thinking of themselves as God's chosen ones. And I feel that much jealousy is called for, that our peace be indeed the peace of God, and not that which arises from our having formerly tasted of His love. Regard yourselves, I entreat you, as a sacred trust; see your spirits and bodies bought with the blood of Christ; and be jealous lest any taint of sin come upon them, while they ought, as belonging to Christ, to be continually pure. Let not any consciousness of grieving the Spirit of God be a light thing. Let it not be a light thing that when in Christ there is such provision for your being pure you should present such a broken, interrupted service to God.

See, I beseech you, the fulness of the provision which in Christ belongs to you, without a single hair's-breadth of distance between you and that provision. God has not only given to all liberty to come to Him, but also power to come. And what is the power? It is power to come out of ignorance of what God is, into the light of what God is. This is what is meant by saying that through Christ there is provision for our entering into the mind and feelings of God.

To enter into the mind of God is to share it. In every sympathy with God of which Christ was conscious when He was here on earth, and of which He is eternally conscious—in every such sympathy He is able to make you sympathise and to make it a like reality in you.

My dear friends, in considering these truths of God and applying them to ourselves, we should never for one moment forget that we are in the flesh, that we are always tempted to judge spiritual things after the natural man; and that we need a present vision of God to see things truly. If we are in present blindness or darkness as to God, that very fact ought to be connected in our minds with an exceeding jealousy of all the judgments in our minds during that darkness. A dark ignorant feeling of earnestness about our salvation, however honest and sincere, will not accomplish salvation for us. A man hopes such a feeling will do: he is not, he cannot be sure that it will do. When he allows himself an hour of serious consideration, he finds that he is standing on a quicksand, and has no sure footing. He is without certainty; he is not dwelling in the light; he is not dwelling in peace; he is not able to commit all futurity to the Lord his God; he is not free from carefulness though he be sincere. Of any one who knows not the provision which there is in Christ as a reality for himself, it must be said that he is not, and cannot be, prepared to meet the Judge who standeth at the door.

AN ESCAPE FROM LOVE.

“AND the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ.”*

If I were to select any expression from the Bible as characteristic of the great object of my teaching, it would be this verse. My great object has been to direct your hearts into the love of God. Whether in doing so I have been drawing you away from the truth of God, let that man answer who has been taught to know the meaning of this word “God is love,” and to know that “love” is the “fulfilling of the law,”—the entire meeting of God’s demand from man. Such a man knows that love is the Alpha and Omega, the first and the last, the beginning and the end; because Jesus Christ is the Alpha and Omega, the first and the last, the beginning and the end ; because Jesus Christ is God who is love, manifested in order to transform us into the same love, and to create in us that mind which was in God from eternity, which was in Christ when on earth, and which will be in the members of His body through all eternity. To "direct your hearts into the love of God" is, I conceive, the object for which God was manifested in the flesh, and the object of all those sufferings to which He submitted—sufferings to which we have no key, unless we see that Christ is God, and that God is love.

Let no one understand the love of God as if it were not also true that God is righteous. But how can you know God's righteousness, how can you know what He rejects, and what it is that He would draw towards Himself, unless you know that He is love ? It is written, "Cursed is the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord." How can you know God's unchangeable truth, unless you know that what He has pronounced a blessing on is love, and that it is on enmity that the curse rests—the enmity which makes a man stand far off from God, and seek to stand above his fellow-men? And why does He put His curse on enmity? Just because ‘He is love.’

What is the meaning of that trust in God which is pleasing to Him? Is it to power that we trust? Is it to strength? Is it to a Being who is mightier than we, and of whom therefore we are afraid, because He could destroy us? Homage springing from such apprehensions of His power God acknowledges not. It is offering Him an insult; for it is saying, ‘If I could be independent, I would not depend on Him.’ What, then, is trust in God? It is not merely trembling because He is stronger than we. To trust in God is to repose on the bosom of infinite love.

I am anxious to impress upon you that there is no one part of God’s acting, from the beginning to the end, which any one can have a right apprehension of who does not know that God is love.

Men say in their blindness, in their sinful enmity to God, and in their anxiety to enjoy a happiness apart from God, that He does all things for His own glory, that for His glory He makes one man miserable and another man happy, and they have thus invented a doctrine whereby they make the living God, the fountain of living waters, to be a fountain which at the same time sends forth sweet waters and bitter. Man never declared a more certain truth than this, that God has done all things for His own glory. But we must know what the glory of God is, before we can understand what we are saying, when we use such language as that His own glory is the object of God's acting. "Glory" is neither more nor less than the manifestation of excellence. It must be an excellence that comes forth, otherwise it is no "glory." And what is that excellent thing in God, the manifestation of which is His glory? It is this, that God is love.

It is true that God does everything for His own glory, but what shall we say of that word when used as men often use it? It is the invention of the sinful heart for the purpose of screening itself from the full blaze of God's love, and behind this screen enjoying some peace away from God. No man can live under the feeling that every attribute of God tells one tale, and that that God desires to bless him; no man can live under the feeling that this is true, not only of himself, but of every child of Adam, without experiencing a mighty and constraining power, in this habitual apprehension of God, causing his heart to rise towards Him in praise and thanks. But from experiencing the power of this manifestation of love, men seek to escape. They will not deny that God is love, but they will throw God's love to a distance; they cast a mist around it, and so reduce themselves to the condition of seeing no certain proof that God loves them. They give a full circle to every attribute in the Godhead but love. They do not limit God's justice, or His holiness, or His truth : all these they admit to be of universal extent : how is it that they will not extend in like manner the love of God, and while they make a complete circle of each of His other attributes, make this attribute but a part of a circle? The secret is this : it is not God's justice, or holiness or truth, that is the instrument of convincing a sinner of his sin, and of forcing him out of his sin, and bringing him, back to God : it is God's love alone that does this. No man can realise that God so loved him, as to give His only-begotten Son for him, and that by the death of His Son God has taken away his condemnation, and is not now imputing sin to him—no man can realise this love, and not be reconciled to God.

The healing, the blessing, the saving of man consists in his heart being directed into the love of God ; and therefore it is that God has revealed Himself to His sinful creatures as putting away their sins by the shedding of the blood of Christ, who is God in our nature ; so that there is no barrier between them and

God, any more than there is between God and creatures who have never sinned; there is no reason why they should not trust in Him, and confide in Him, and love Him just as entirely as if their consciences did not reproach them with the slightest breach of His law.

I wish to bring out to you now the connection between dwelling in the love of God and entering into God's plan, in respect of the government of His creatures—the "patient waiting for Christ." The possibility of anything like happiness in the state of living without God, arises from the nature of a day of grace. If God does not bring immediate destruction on a creature who sins, thus dealing with sin according to its nature the moment it meets His eye, it is not because He is indifferent to evil, but because He would keep open the possibility of His creature's return to Him. But this is not to be the permanent state of things. God has not, after creating man and telling him what was good and what was evil, withdrawn and left him to choose good or evil as he pleased, without interfering in the matter, leaving sin and holiness to work their own results. We see, indeed, that there is a tendency in evil to produce misery, and in good to produce pleasure and happiness; but it is nevertheless possible in the present state of things for a good man to be a sufferer from evil, and for a wicked man to be tasting of happiness: the connection between sin and misery is not of such a kind as would necessarily make every moment of the sinner's wickedness to be misery, or secure the being that is holy from disquietude and infelicity. We see, from the history of the world, that evil may be in high places, and that good may be the oppressed thing; that evil may be triumphing over good. Had this been according to God's ultimate plan for the world, there would have been no prospect but the desolate one of seeing evil working here and good there for ever, as from the beginning of history has been the case, the good having no power to put down the evil. It is not enough to see that God's government tends to the putting glory, and honour, and power, and praise on the side of goodness, and misery and evil on the side of iniquity, while we see also the good actually oppressed. It would be impossible for our hearts to be directed into the love of God unless we had the prospect of a time coming when the wicked will no longer oppress the just, and when the good shall be separated from the evil.

It is a part of the faith in God of the children of God, that there will come a time in which this same earth, which is now a scene of darkness and rebellion, shall be filled with the glory of the Lord ; and when from every part of it, even from the rising to the setting sun, incense and a pure offering shall ascend unto God.

There is a power in this faith to direct men's hearts into the love of God, for it draws away the mind from the individual personal object of our own happiness, and raises us to the idea of a God who reigneth. If my mind rests upon the idea that my own conflict will soon be over, that I shall soon be landed on the peaceful shores of eternity, a selfish character is given to my joy. I am not in this sympathising with God ; or at least I am sympathizing with only a part of His mind. I am not carried forward to the hour when not only I shall be delivered from the distress of sin, but when sin shall be swept away ; when sin shall not only not oppress me, but when it shall not oppress the just.

I desire to press this distinction, and to show you that so long as your hope merely turns to the period when you shall yourselves be free, and not to the period when evil shall be put away, you are not raised up into a state in which your joys are those of Him who looks to the whole, and sees the end from the beginning, and in which your sorrows are also those of Him who looks to the whole, and sees the end from the beginning. If you anticipate a time when the glory of God shall occupy that place in man's heart which selfishness now occupies; when men shall dwell in the spirit of love to God and man, not in some distant, unknown world, but just here, on this earth where you are, you will in looking forward to such a time have a joy and consolation which are the same as God's.

There is in the human heart a tendency so to separate between the world that now is and some future world, as to feel that while in this world, we must live like the world, and that when we die, we shall be fitted for heaven if we have a title for heaven. Men do not see that heaven begins in any heart when God reigns in it, and that they are making a false separation between the present and the future. They would be delivered from this delusion, could they perceive that the present world is what it is, just because God is not acknowledged in it—is not glorified in it; and that there is no necessity for God's not being glorified on the earth, as God will show when the rightful King shall manifest His character and claim His redeemed inheritance.

It is in looking to God as reigning that I see what a blessed and glorious thing it is, that God is such a God, and will so reign; and that I am made to enter into the evil of rebellion against Him, and to see everything that is evil in the world as resistance to God, and everything that is good as fulfilling His purpose.

But what is meant by the "patient waiting for Christ?" Patience here is not expressive of contentedness with the present evil state of things. We should receive a great injury, if our knowledge of God's plan had the least tendency to reconcile us to the existence of any evil thing. We must see evil as that which God desires to see destroyed, otherwise we cannot feel that in praying that His kingdom may come, we are acting according to His will. The patience spoken of is not patience with sin; but patience under the personal experience of the painful consequences of sin. It is not that our hearts are not to be continually joining in the earnest cry that evil may be destroyed; but that we are to be content to suffer where Christ suffered, to be hated where Christ was hated, to be misunderstood where Christ was misunderstood.

The thought of Christ's reign casts a nothingness upon all selfish plans and expectations; but the new order of things will only destroy what is evil. That which is good will last. It is blessed to know that nothing good is short-lived; that nothing worth keeping shall be destroyed ; that nothing which it is worth while to set a heart upon shall ever be taken from that heart ; that nothing shall ever be taken away but what it is better should be taken away. If men repine at the transitory nature of the present state, it is altogether the distress of ignorance ; and if they saw things aright, instead of being sorry that life is short and uncertain, they would rejoice that the fashion of the world passeth away, and that the reign of Christ will soon come.

This volume contains twenty-four Sermons preached at various times during the last few years in the Temple Church, and are characterised by such qualities as are likely to make them acceptable to cultivated and thoughtful readers. The following are a few of the topics treated of:—"Boldness;" "Murder, Ancient and Modern;" "The Atonement;" "The Resurrection;" "The Fear of Death;" "The Forgiveness of Sins, the Remission of a Debt" (2 Sermons); "Anger, Noble and Ignoble;" "Culture and Temptation;" "The Religious Aspect of Wit and Humour;" "The Life of the Ascended Christ." "It is," the British Quarterly says, "the fresh unconventional talk of a clear independent thinker, addressed to a congregation of thinkers. . . . Thoughtful men will be greatly charmed by this little volume."

Alexander.—THE LEADING IDEAS of the GOSPELS. Five Sermons preached before the University of Oxford in 1870—71. By WILLIAM ALEXANDER, D.D., Brasenose College; Lord Bishop of Derry and Raphao; Select Preacher. Cr. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Each of these Sermons is on a characteristic text taken successively from each of the four Gospels, there being two on that from St. John; viz.—St. Matt. i. 1; St. Mark i. 1; St. Luke i. 3; St. John i. 1, 14. "Dr. Alexander is eminently fitted for the task he has undertaken. He has a singular felicity of style, which lights up the discourse and clothes it with great beauty and impressiveness."—Nonconformist.

Arnold.—A BIBLE READING BOOK FOR SCHOOLS. THE GREAT PROPHECY OF ISRAEL'S RESTORATION (Isaiah, Chapters 40—66). Arranged and Edited for Young Learners. By MATTHEW ARNOLD, D.C.L., formerly Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford, and Fellow of Oriel. Third Edition. 18mo. cloth. 1s.

Mr. Arnold has undertaken this really important task, on account of his conviction "of the immense importance in education of what is called letters; of the side which engages our feelings and imagination." In this little volume he attempts to do for the Bible what has been so abundantly done for Greek and Roman, as well as English authors; viz.—to take "some whole, of admirable literary beauty in style and treatment, of manageable length, within defined limits; and present this to the learner in an intelligible shape, adding such explanations and helps as may enable him to grasp it as a connected and complete work." The Times says—"Whatever may be the fate of this little book in Government Schools, there can be no doubt that it will be found excellently calculated to further instruction in Biblical literature in any school into which it may be introduced... We can safely say that whatever school uses this book, it will enable its pupils to understand Isaiah, a great advantage compared with other establishments which do not avail themselves of it."

Baring-Gould.—LEGENDS OF OLD TESTAMENT CHARACTERS, from the Talmud and other sources. By the Rev. S. BARING-GOULD, M.A., Author of "Curious Myths of the Middle Ages," "The Origin and Development of Religious Belief," "In Exitu Israel," etc. In two vols. crown 8vo. 16s. Vol. I. Adam to Abraham. Vol. II. Melchizedek to Zechariah.

Mr. Baring-Gould's previous contributions to the History of Mythology, and the formation of a science of comparative religion are admitted to be of the highest importance; the present work, it is believed, will be found of equal value. He has collected from the Talmud and other sources, Jewish and Mahomedan, a large number of curious and interesting legends concerning the principal characters of the Old Testament, comparing these frequently with similar legends current among many of the peoples, savage and civilised, all over the world. "These volumes contain much that is strange, and to the ordinary English reader, very novel."—Daily News.

Barry, Alfred, D.D.—The ATONEMENT of CHRIST. Six Lectures delivered in Hereford Cathedral during Holy Week, 1871. By ALFRED BARRY, D.D., D.C.L., Canon of Worcester, Principal of King's College, London. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

In writing these Sermons, it has been the object of Canon Barry to set forth the deep practical importance of the doctrinal truths of the Atonement. "The one truth," says the Preface, "which, beyond all others, I desire that these may suggest, is the inseparable unity which must exist between Christian doctrine, even in its more mysterious forms, and Christian morality or devotion. They are a slight contribution to the plea of that connection of Religion and Theology, which in our own time is so frequently and, as it seems to me, so unreasonably denied." The Guardian calls them "striking and eloquent lectures."

Benham.—A COMPANION TO THE LECTIONARY, being a Commentary on the Proper Lessons for Sundays and Holidays. By the Rev. W. BENHAM, B.D., Vicar of Margate. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

This work is the result of many years' study on the part of the author, who has sought for assistance from the works of the ablest modern divines. The author's object is to give the reader a clear understanding of the Lessons of the Church, which he does by means of general and special introductions, and critical and explanatory notes on all words and passages presenting the least difficulty.

Binney.—SERMONS PREACHED IN THE KING'S WEIGH HOUSE CHAPEL, 1829—69. By THOMAS BINNEY, D.D. New and Cheaper Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

In the earnestness and vigour which characterize the sermons in this volume the reader will find a clue to the vast influence exerted by Mr. Binney for forty years over a wide circle, particularly young men. In the concluding sermon, preached after the publication of the first edition, he reviews the period of his ministry as a whole, dwelling especially on its religious aspects. "Full of robust intelligence, of reverent but independent thinking on the most profound and holy themes, and of earnest practical purpose."—London Quarterly Review.

Bradby.—SERMONS PREACHED AT HAILEYBURY. By E. H. BRADBY, M.A., Master. 8vo. [Immediately.]

Burgon.—A TREATISE on the PASTORAL OFFICE.

Addressed chiefly to Candidates for Holy Orders, or to those who have recently undertaken the cure of souls. By the Rev. JOHN W. BURGON, M.A., Oxford. 8vo. 12s.

The object of this work is to expound the great ends to be accomplished by the Pastoral office, and to investigate the various means by which these ends may best be gained. Full directions are given as to preaching and sermon-writing, pastoral visitation, village education and catechising, and confirmation. Under the heading of "Pastoral Method" the author shows how each of the occasional offices of the Church may be most properly conducted, as well as how a clergyman's ordinary public ministrations may be performed with the greatest success. The best methods of parochial management are examined, and an effort is made to exhibit the various elements of the true pastoral spirit. "The spirit in which it approaches and solves practical questions is at once full of common sense and at the same time marked by a deep reverential piety and a largeness of charity which are truly admirable."—Spectator.

Butler (G.).—Works by the Rev. GEORGE BUTLER, M.A., Principal of Liverpool College:FAMILY PRAYERS. Crown 8vo. 5s.

The prayers in this volume are all based on passages of Scripture—the morning prayers on Select Psalms, those for the evening on portions of the New Testament.

SERMONS PREACHED in CHELTENHAM COLLEGE CHAPEL. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

These Sermons, twenty-nine in number, were delivered at intervals from the opening of Cheltenham College Chapel in 1858, to the last Sunday of the year 1861, and contain references to the important events which occurred during that period—the Indian mutiny, the French campaign in Italy, the liberation of Sicily and Naples, the establishment of the kingdom of Italy, the American Civil War, and the deaths of many eminent men. "These sermons are plain, practical, and well adapted to the auditors. . . . We cordially recommend the volume as a model of pulpit style, and for individual and family reading."—Weekly Review.

Butler (Rev. H. M.)—SERMONS PREACHED in the CHAPEL OF HARROW SCHOOL. By H. MONTAGU BUTLER, Head Master. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Whilst these Sermons were prepared to meet the wants of a special class, there is a constant reference in them to the great principles which underlie all Christian thought and action. They deal with such subjects as "Temptation," "Courage," "Duty without regard to consequences," "Success," "Devout Impulses," and "The Soul's need of God." "These sermons are adapted for every household. There is nothing more striking than the excellent good sense with which they are imbued."—Spectator.

A SECOND SERIES. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"Excellent specimens of what sermons should be,—plain, direct, practical, pervaded by the true spirit of the Gospel, and holding up lofty aims before the minds of the young."—Athenæum.

Butler (Rev. W. Archer)—Works by the Rev. WILLIAM ARCHER BUTLER, M.A., late Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Dublin:—

SERMONS, DOCTRINAL AND PRACTICAL. Edited, with a Memoir of the Author's Life, by THOMAS WOODWARD, Dean of Down. With Portrait. Eighth and Cheaper Edition, 8vo. 8s.

The following selections from the titles of the sermons will give a fair idea of the contents of the volume:—"The Mystery of the Holy Incarnation;" "The Daily Self-Denial of Christ;" "The Power of the Resurrection;" "Self-Delusion as to our Real State before God;" "The Faith of Man and the Faithfulness of God;" "The Wedding-Garment;" "Human Affections Raised, not Destroyed by the Gospel;" "The Rest of the People of God;" "The Divinity of our Priest, Prophet, and King;" "Church Education in Ireland" (two Sermons). The Introductory Memoir narrates in considerable detail and with much interest, the events of Butler's brief life; and contains a few specimens of his poetry, and a few extracts from his addresses and essays, including a long and eloquent passage on the Province and Duty of the Preacher.

A SECOND SERIES OF SERMONS. Edited by J. A. JEREMIE, D.D., Dean of Lincoln. Sixth and Cheaper Edition. 8vo. 7s.

In this volume are contained other twenty-six of the late Professor Butler's Sermons, embracing a wide range of Christian topics, as will be seen by the following selection from the titles:—"Christ the Source of all Blessings;" "The Hope of Glory and the Charities of Life;" "The Holy Trinity;" "The Sorrow that Exalts and Sanctifies;" "The Growth of the Divine Life;" "The Folly of Moral Cowardice;" "Strength and Mission of the Church;" "The Blessedness of Submission;" "Eternal Punishment." The North British Review says, "Few sermons in our language exhibit the same rare combination of excellencies; imagery almost as rich as Taylor's; oratory as vigorous often as South's; judgment as sound as Barrow's; a style as attractive but more copious, original, and forcible than Atterbury's; piety as elevated as Howe's, and a fervour as intense as Baxter's. Mr. Butler's are the sermons of a true poet."

LETTERS ON ROMANISM, in reply to Dr. Newman's Essay on Development. Edited by the Dean of Down. Second Edition, revised by Archdeacon HARDWICK. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

These Letters contain an exhaustive criticism of Dr. Newman's famous "Essay on the Development of Christian Doctrine." An attempt is made to shew that the theory is opposed to the received doctrine of the Romish Church; that it is based on purely imaginary grounds, and necessarily carries with it consequences in the highest degree dangerous both to Christianity and to general truth. Whilst the work is mainly polemical in its character, it contains the exposition of many principles of far more than mere temporary interest. "A work which ought to be in the Library of every student of Divinity."—BP. ST. DAVID'S.

LECTURES ON ANCIENT PHILOSOPHY. See SCIENTIFIC CATALOGUE.

Cambridge Lent Sermons.—SERMONS preached during Lent, 1864, in Great St. Mary's Church, Cambridge. By the BISHOP OF OXFORD, Revs. H. P. LIDDON, T. L. CLAUGHTON, J. R. WOODFORD, Dr. GOULBURN, J. W. BURGON, T. T. CARTER, Dr. PUSEY, Dean HOOK, W. J. BUTLER, Dean GOODWIN. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Campbell.—Works by JOHN M'LEOD CAMPBELL :—

THE NATURE OF THE ATONEMENT AND ITS RELATION TO REMISSION OF SINS AND ETERNAL LIFE. Third Edition, with an Introduction and Notes. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

Three chapters of this work are devoted to the teaching of Luther on the subject of the Atonement, and to Calvinism, as taught by Dr. Owen and President Edwards, and as recently modified. The remainder is occupied with the different aspects of the Atonement as conceived by the author himself, the object being partly to meet the objections of honest inquirers, but mainly so to reveal the subject in its own light as to render self-evident its adaptation to the spiritual wants of man. Professor Rolleston, in quoting from this book in his address to the Biological Section of the British Association (Liverpool, September, 1870), speaks of it as "the great work of one of the first of living theologians." "Among the first theological treatises of this generation."—Guardian.

CHRIST THE BREAD OF LIFE. An Attempt to give a profitable direction to the present occupation of Thought with Romanism. Second Edition, greatly enlarged. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

In this volume the Doctrines of the Infallibility of the Church and Transubstantiation are regarded as addressed to real inward needs of humanity, and an effort is made to disengage them from the truths whose place they usurp, and to exhibit these truths as adequate to meet human cravings. The aim is, first, to offer help to those who feel the attractions to Romanism too strong to be overcome by direct arguments addressed to sense and reason; and, second, to quicken interest in the Truth itself. "Deserves the most attentive study by all who interest themselves in the predominant religious controversy of the day."—Spectator.

REMINISCENCES AND REFLECTIONS, referring to his Early Ministry in the Parish of Row, 1825—31. Edited with an Introductory Narrative by his eldest Son, DONALD CAMPBELL, M.A., Chaplain of King's College, London. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The late Dr. McLeod Campbell was acknowledged to be a man of exceptional gifts and earnestness, and his early life was connected with one of the most exciting, interesting, and important controversies that ever agitated the Church of Scotland. These 'Reminiscences and Reflections,' written during the last year of his life, were mainly intended to place on record thoughts which might prove helpful to others,—and no one was more qualified to give such help to those who are earnestly seeking spiritual truth and peace. The author, in this work, deals with questions of vital moment, in a way that but few are qualified to do.

Canterbury.—THE PRESENT POSITION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND. Seven Addresses delivered to the Clergy and Churchwardens of his Diocese, as his Charge, at his Primary Visitation, 1872. By ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, Archbishop of Canterbury. Third Edition. 8vo. cloth. 3s. 6d.

*The subjects of these Addresses are, I. Lay Co-operation. II. Cathedral Reform. III. and IV. Ecclesiastical Judicature. V. Ecclesiastical Legislation. VI. Missionary Work of the Church. VII. Cheyne.—Works by T. K. CHEYNE, M.A., Fellow of Balliol College, Oxford :—

THE BOOK OF ISAIAH CHRONOLOGICALLY ARRANGED. An Amended Version, with Historical and Critical Introductions and Explanatory Notes. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The object of this edition is to restore the probable meaning of Isaiah, so far as can be expressed in appropriate English. The basis of the version is the revised translation of 1611, but alterations have been introduced wherever the true sense of the prophecies appeared to require it. The Westminster Review speaks of it as "a piece of

EXPOSITORY SERMONS ON THE EPISTLES FOR THE SUNDAYS OF THE CHRISTIAN YEAR. Two Vols. Crown 8vo. 15s.

These two volumes contain in all fifty-seven Sermons. They were all preached at various stations throughout India, and from the nature of the circumstances which called them forth, the varied subjects of which they treat are dealt with in such a manner as is likely to prove acceptable to Christians in general.

Cure.—THE SEVEN WORDS OF CHRIST ON THE CROSS. Sermons preached at St. George's, Bloomsbury. By the Rev. E. CAPEL CURE, M.A. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Of these Sermons the John Bull says, "They are earnest and practical;" the Nonconformist, "The Sermons are beautiful, tender, and instructive;" and the Spectator calls them "A set of really good Sermons."

Curteis.—DISSENT in its RELATION to the CHURCH OF ENGLAND. Eight Lectures preached before the University of Oxford, in the year 1871, on the foundation of the late Rev. John Bampton, M.A., Canon of Salisbury. By GEORGE HERBERT CURTEIS, M.A., late Fellow and Sub-Rector of Exeter College; Principal of the Lichfield Theological College, and Prebendary of Lichfield Cathedral; Rector of Turweston, Bucks. 8vo. 14s.

In these Bampton Lectures the Author has endeavoured to accomplish three things:—I. To shew those who are in despair at the present divided aspect of Christendom, that from the Apostles' time downwards there has never been an age of the Church without similar internal conflicts; that if well managed, these dissensions may be kept within bounds, and made to minister to the life and movement of the whole polity; but if ill-managed, they are always liable to become a wasting fever instead of a healthy warmth. II. To present materials by which Churchmen might be aided in forming an intelligent and candid judgment as to what precisely these dissenting denominations really are; what it is they do, and what they claim to teach; and why it is they are now combining to bring the Church of England, if possible, to the ground. III. To point out some few indications of the wonderful and every way deplorable misapprehensions which have clothed the Church of England to their eyes in colours absolutely foreign to her true character; have ascribed to her doctrines absolutely contrary to her meaning; and have interpreted her customs in a way repellant to the Christian Common-sense of her own people.

Davies.—Works by the Rev. J. LLEWELYN DAVIES, M.A., Rector of Christ Church, St. Marylebone, etc. :—

THE WORK OF CHRIST; or, the World Reconciled to God. With a Preface on the Atonement Controversy. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.

The Preface is devoted to shewing that certain popular theories of the Atonement are opposed to the moral sense of mankind, and are not imposed on Christians by statements either in the Old or New Testaments.*

SERMONS on the MANIFESTATION OF THE SON OF GOD. With a Preface addressed to Laymen on the present Position of the Clergy of the Church of England; and an Appendix on the Testimony of Scripture and the Church as to the possibility of Pardon in the Future State. Fcap. 8vo. 6s. 6d.

The Preface to this work is mainly occupied with the distinction between the essential and non-essential elements of the Christian faith, proving that the central religious controversy of the day relates, not, as many suppose, to such questions as the Inspiration of Scripture, but to the profounder question, whether the Son of God actually has been manifested in the person of Jesus of Nazareth. The grounds on which the Christian bases his faith are also examined. In the Appendix the testimony of the Bible and the Anglican formularies as to the possibility of pardon in the future in her daily forms of Morning and Evening Prayer, by shewing how all the parts of them may have a just bearing upon Christian practice, and so may have a deep influence upon the conduct of all our honest worshippers, under every possible relation and circumstance of life." "For a certain devout tenderness of feeling and religious earnestness of purpose, this little book of Mr. De Teissier's is really noteworthy; and it is a book which grows upon you very much when you read it."—Literary Churchman.

"The best and most established believer will find it adding some fresh buttresses to his faith."—Literary Churchman. "If we have not misunderstood him, we have before us a writer who has a right to claim deference from those who think deepest and know most."—Guardian.

THE FALL OF MAN, AND OTHER SERMONS. Second and Cheaper Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

This volume contains twenty Sermons. No attempt is made in these sermons to develop a system of doctrine. In each discourse some one aspect of truth is taken up, the chief object being to point out its bearings on practical religious life. The Nonconformist says of these Sermons,—“Mr. Farrar's Sermons are almost perfect specimens of one type of Sermons, which we may concisely call

CHRIST AND OTHER MASTERS. A Historical Inquiry into some of the Chief Parallelisms and Contrasts between Christianity and the Religious Systems of the Ancient World. New Edition, revised, and a Prefatory Memoir by the Rev. FRANCIS PROCTER, M.A. Two vols. crown 8vo. 15s.

After several introductory chapters dealing with the religious tendencies of the present age, the unity of the human race, and the characteristics of Religion under the Old Testament, the Author proceeds to consider the Religions of India, China, America, Oceanica, Egypt, and Medo-Persia. The history and characteristics of these Religions are examined, and an effort is made to bring out the points of difference and affinity between them and Christianity. The object is to establish the perfect adaptation of the latter faith to human nature in all its phases and at all times. "The plan of the work is boldly and almost nobly conceived. . . We commend the work to the perusal of all those who take interest in the study of ancient mythology, without losing their reverence for the supreme authority of the oracles of the living God."—Christian Observer.

A HISTORY OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH. Middle Age. From Gregory the Great to the Excommunication of Luther, Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Oxford. With Four Maps constructed for this work by A. KEITH JOHNSTON. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

Although the ground-plan of this treatise coincides in many points

with that of the colossal work of Schröckh, yet in arranging the materials a very different course has frequently been pursued. With regard to his opinions the late author avowed distinctly that he construed history with the specific prepossessions of an Englishman and a member of the English Church. The reader is constantly referred to the authorities, both original and critical, on which the statements are founded. For this edition Professor Stubbs has carefully revised both text and notes, making such corrections of facts, dates, and the like as the results of recent research warrant. The doctrinal, historical, and generally speculative views of the late author have been preserved intact. "As a Manual for the student of ecclesiastical history in the Middle Ages, we know no English work which can be compared to Mr. Hardwick's book."
—Guardian.

A HISTORY of the CHRISTIAN CHURCH DURING THE REFORMATION. New Edition, revised by Professor STUBBS. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

This volume is intended as a sequel and companion to the "History of the Christian Church during the Middle Age." The author's earnest wish has been to give the reader a trustworthy version of those stirring incidents which mark the Reformation period, without relinquishing his former claim to characterise peculiar systems, persons, and events according to the shades and colours they assume, when contemplated from an English point of view, and by a member of the Church of England.

Hervey.—THE GENEALOGIES OF OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST, as contained in the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Luke, reconciled with each other, and shown to be in harmony with the true Chronology of the Times. By Lord ARTHUR HERVEY, Bishop of Bath and Wells. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The difficulties and importance of the subject are first stated, the three main points of inquiry being clearly brought out. The Author then proceeds to shew that the genealogies of St. Matthew's and St. Luke's Gospels are both genealogies of Joseph, and examines the principle on which they are framed. In the following chapters the remaining aspects of the subject are exhaustively investigated.

Hymni Ecclesiæ.—Fcap. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

A selection of Latin Hymns of the Mediæval Church, containing selections from the Paris Breviary, and the Breviaries of Rome, Salisbury, and York. This collection was edited by Dr. Newman while he lived at Oxford.

The original Latin text has been here faithfully reproduced. The Spectator says of this edition, it "has many solid merits, and is perfect in its way." While the Athenæum says, "The whole work is admirable; some of the figure compositions have extraordinary merit."

Kingsley.—Works by the Rev. CHARLES KINGSLEY, M.A., Rector of Eversley, and Canon of Chester. (For other Works by the same author, see HISTORICAL and BELLES LETTRES CATALOGUES).

The high merits of Mr. Kingsley's Sermons are acknowledged. Whether preached to the rustic audience of a village Church or to the princely congregation of the Chapel Royal, these Sermons are invariably characterized by intense earnestness and magnanimity, combined with genuine charity and winning tenderness; the style is always clear, simple, and unaffectedly natural, abounding in beautiful illustration, the fruit of a rich fancy and a cultivated taste. They are emphatically practical.

THE GOSPEL OF THE PENTATEUCH. Second Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

This volume consists of eighteen Sermons on passages taken from the Pentateuch. They are dedicated to Dean Stanley out of gratitude for his Lectures on the Jewish Church, under the influence and in the spirit of which they were written. “With your book in my hand,” Mr. Kingsley says in his Preface, “I have tried to write a few plain Sermons, telling plain people what they will find in the Pentateuch. I have told them that they will find in the Bible, and in no other ancient book, that living working God, whom their reason and conscience demand; and that they will find that He is none other than Jesus Christ our Lord.”

GOOD NEWS OF GOD. Fourth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Some of these Sermons were preached before the Queen, and some in the performance of the writer’s ordinary parochial duty. There are thirty-nine in all, under such titles as the following:—“How to keep Passion-Week;” “A Soldier’s Training;” “Turning-points;” “Work;” “The Rock of Ages;” “The Loftiness of Humility;” “The Central Sun;” “Εν Τούτῳ Νίκα;” “The Eternal Manhood;” “Hypocrisy;” “The Wrath of Love.” Of these Sermons the Nonconformist says, “They are warm with the fervour of the preacher’s own heart, and strong from the force of his own convictions. There is nowhere an attempt at display, and the clearness and simplicity of the style make them suitable for the youngest or most unintelligent of his hearers.”

THE KING OF THE EARTH, and other Sermons, a Second Series of Sermons on National Subjects. Second Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The following extract from the Preface to the 2nd Series will explain the preacher’s aim in these Sermons:—“I have tried.....to proclaim the Lord Jesus Christ, as the Scriptures, both in their strictest letter and in their general method, from Genesis to Revelation, seem to me to proclaim Him; not merely as the Saviour of a few elect souls, but as the light and life of every human being who enters into the world; as the source of all reason, strength, and virtue in heathen or in Christian; as the King and Ruler of

His death, as a full, perfect, and sufficient sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction for the sins of the whole world, by which God is reconciled to the whole human race.*

DISCIPLINE, AND OTHER SERMONS. Fcp. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Herein are twenty-four Sermons preached on various occasions, some of them of a public nature—at the Volunteer Camp, Wimbledon, before the Prince of Wales at Sandringham, at Wellington College, etc. A few of the titles are—"Discipline" (to Volunteers); "Prayer and Science;" "False Civilization;" "The End of Religion;" "The Humanity of God;" "God's World;" "Self-Help;" "Toleration;" "The Likeness of God." This volume the Nonconformist calls,—“Eminently practical and appropriate ..... Earnest stirring words.” The Guardian says,—“There is much thought, tenderness, and devoutness of spirit in these Sermons, and some of them are models both in matter and expression.”

DAVID. FOUR SERMONS: David's Weakness—David's Strength—David's Anger—David's Deserts. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

These four Sermons were preached before the University of Cambridge, and are specially addressed to young men. Their titles are,—“David's Weakness;” “David's Strength;” “David's Anger;” “David's Deserts.” The Freeman says—“Every paragraph glows with manly energy, delivers straightforward practical truths, in a vigorous, sometimes even passionate way, and exhibits an intense sympathy with everything honest, pure, and noble.”

Churches of Galatia, the date and genuineness of the Epistle, and its character and contents. The dissertations discuss the question whether the Galatians were Celts or Tartars, and the whole subject of "The Brethren of the Lord," and "St. Paul and the Three." While the Author's object has been to make this commentary generally complete, he has paid special attention to everything relating to St. Paul's personal history and his intercourse with the Apostles and Church of the Circumcision, as it is this feature in the Epistle to the Galatians which has given it an overwhelming interest in recent theological controversy. The Spectator says "there is no commentator at once of sounder judgment and more liberal than Dr. Lightfoot."

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS. A Revised Text, with Introduction, Notes, and Dissertations. Second Edition. 8vo. 12s.

*The plan of this volume is the same as that of "The Epistle to the Galatians." The Introduction deals with the following subjects:—"St. Paul in Rome," "Order of the Epistles of the Captivity," "The Church of Philippi," "Character and Contents of the Epistle," and its genuineness. The Dissertations are on "The Christian Ministry," "St. Paul and Seneca," and "The Letters of Paul and Seneca." "No commentary in the English language can be compared with it in regard to fulness of information, exact scholarship, and laboured attempts to settle everything about the epistle on a solid foundation."—Athenæum. ON A FRESH REVISION OF THE ENGLISH NEW TESTAMENT. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The Author begins with a few words on S. Jerome's revision of the Latin Bible, and then goes on to shew in detail the necessity for a fresh revision of the authorized version on the following grounds:—1. False Readings. 2. Artificial distinctions created. 3. Real distinctions obliterated. 4. Faults of Grammar. 5. Faults of Lexicography. 6. Treatment of Proper Names, official titles, etc. 7. Archaisms, defects in the English, errors of the press, etc. The volume is completed by (1) an elaborate appendix on the words ἐπιόβριος and περιόβριος, (2) a table of passages of Scripture quoted, and (3) a general index. "The book is marked by careful scholarship, familiarity with the subject, sobriety, and circumspection."—Athenæum. "It abounds with evidence of the most extensive learning, and of a masterly familiarity with the best results of modern Greek scholarship."—Standard.

Fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Maclear.—Works by G. F. MACLEAR, D.D., Head Master of King's College School:—*A CLASS-BOOK OF OLD TESTAMENT HISTORY.

With Four Maps. Sixth Edition. 18mo. 4s. 6d.

"The present volume," says the Preface, "forms a Class-Book of Old Testament History from the Earliest Times to those of Ezra and Nehemiah. In its preparation the most recent authorities have been consulted, and wherever it has appeared useful, Notes have been subjoined illustrative of the Text, and, for the sake of more advanced students, references added to larger works. The Index has been so arranged as to form a concise Dictionary of the Persons and Places mentioned in the course of the Narrative." The Maps, prepared by Stanford, materially add to the value and usefulness of the book. The British Quarterly Review calls it "A careful and elaborate, though brief compendium of all that modern research has done for the illustration of the Old Testament. We know of no work which contains so much important information in so small a compass."

A CLASS-BOOK OF NEW TESTAMENT HISTORY.

Including the Connexion of the Old and New Testament. Fourth Edition. 18mo. 5s. 6d.

The present volume forms a sequel to the Author's Class-Book of Old Testament History, and continues the narrative to the close of

St. Paul's second imprisonment at Rome. It is marked by the same characteristics as the former work, and it is hoped that it may prove at once a useful Class-Book and a convenient companion to the study of the Greek Testament. The work is divided into three Books—I. The Connection between the Old and New Testaments. II. The Gospel History. III. The Apostolic History. In the Appendix are given Chronological Tables. The Clerical Journal says, "It is not often that such an amount of useful and interesting matter on biblical subjects, is found in so convenient and small a compass, as in this well-arranged volume."

A CLASS-BOOK OF THE CATECHISM OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND. Second Edition. 18mo. cloth. 2s. 6d.

The present work is intended as a sequel to the two preceding books.

"Like them, it is furnished with notes and references to larger works, and it is hoped that it may be found, especially in the higher forms of our Public Schools, to supply a suitable manual of instruction in the chief doctrines of our Church, and a useful help in the preparation of Candidates for Confirmation." The Author goes over the Church Catechism clause by clause, and gives all needful explanation and illustration, doctrinal, practical, and historical; the Notes make the work especially valuable to the student and clergyman. Appended are a General Index, an Index of Greek and Latin Words, and an Index of the Words explained throughout the book. The Literary Churchman says, "It is indeed the work of a scholar and divine, and as such, though extremely simple, it is also extremely instructive. There are few clergy who would not find it useful in preparing candidates for Confirmation; and there are not a few who would find it useful to themselves as well."

A FIRST CLASS-BOOK OF THE CATECHISM OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND, with Scripture Proofs for Junior Classes and Schools. Second Edition. 18mo. 6d.

This is an epitome of the larger Class-book, meant for junior students and elementary classes. The book has been carefully condensed, so

Like it the present Manual is subdivided into five parts, each part into a number of short chapters, one or more of which might form a suitable lesson, and each chapter is subdivided in a number of sections, each with a prominent title indicative of its contents. It will be found a valuable Manual to all who are concerned with the religious training of children.*

A SHILLING-BOOK of OLD TESTAMENT HISTORY.

18mo. cloth limp. 1s.

This Manual bears the same relation to the larger Old Testament History, that the book just mentioned does to the larger work on the Catechism. As in it, the small-type notes have been omitted, and a clear and full epitome given of the larger work. It consists of Ten Books, divided into short chapters, and subdivided into sections, each section treating of a single episode in the history, the title of which is given in bold type. The Map is clearly printed, and not overcrowded with names.

A SHILLING-BOOK of NEW TESTAMENT HISTORY.

18mo. cloth limp. 1s.

This bears the same relation to the larger New Testament History that the work just mentioned has to the large Old Testament History, and is marked by similar characteristics.

THE ORDER OF CONFIRMATION. A Sequel to the Class-Book of the Church Catechism, with Prayers and Collects.

18mo. 3d.

The Order of Confirmation is given in full, after which the Manual is divided into seven brief chapters:—I. "The Meaning of Confirmation." II. "The Origin of Confirmation." III., IV., V. "The Order of Confirmation," treating, (1) of "The Interrogation and Answer," (2) "The Laying on of Hands," (3) "The Prayers and Benediction," VI. "The Holy Communion." Chapter VII. consists of a few suitable Prayers and

Macmillan.—Works by the Rev. HUGH MACMILLAN. (For other Works by the same Author, see CATALOGUE OF TRAVELS and SCIENTIFIC CATALOGUE).

THE TRUE VINE; or, the Analogies of our Lord's Allegory. Second Edition. Globe 8vo. 6s.

This work is not merely an exposition of the fifteenth chapter of St. John's Gospel, but also a general parable of spiritual truth from the world of plants. It describes a few of the points in which the varied realm of vegetable life comes into contact with the higher spiritual realm, and shews how rich a field of promise lies before the analogical mind in this direction. The majority of the analogies are derived from the grape-vine; but the whole range of the vegetable kingdom is laid under contribution for appropriate illustration. Indeed, Mr. Macmillan has brought into his service many of the results of recent scientific and historic research and biblical criticism; as well as the discoveries of travellers ancient and modern. The work will thus be found not only admirably suited for devotional reading, but also full of valuable and varied instruction. The Nonconformist says, "It abounds in exquisite bits of description, and in striking facts clearly stated." The British Quarterly says, "Readers and preachers who are unscientific will find many of his illustrations as valuable as they are beautiful."

BIBLE TEACHINGS IN NATURE. Seventh Edition. Globe 8vo. 6s.

In this volume the author has endeavoured to shew that the teaching of nature and the teaching of the Bible are directed to the same great end; that the Bible contains the spiritual truths which are necessary to make us wise unto salvation, and the objects and scenes of nature are the pictures by which these truths are illustrated. The first eight chapters describe, as it were, the exterior appearance of nature's temple—the gorgeous, many-coloured curtain hanging before the shrine. The last seven chapters bring us into the interior—the holy place, where is seen the very core of symbolical ordinances. “He has made the world more beautiful to us, and unsealed our ears to voices of praise and messages of love that might otherwise have been unheard.”—British Quarterly Review. “Mr. Macmillan has produced a book which may be fully described as one of the happiest efforts for enlisting physical science in the direct service of religion.”—Guardian.

THE MINISTRY OF NATURE. Second Edition. Globe 8vo. 6s.

*Mr. Macmillan believes that nature has a spiritual as well as a material side,—that she exists not only for the natural uses of the body, but also for the sustenance of the life of the soul. This higher ministry, the author believes, explains all the beauty and wonder of the world, which would often be superfluous or extravagant. In this volume of fourteen chapters the Author attempts to interpret Nature on her religious side in accordance with the most recent discoveries of physical science, and to shew how much greater significance is imparted to many passages of Scripture and many doctrines of Christianity when looked at in the light of these discoveries. Instead of regarding Physical Science as antagonistic to Christianity, the Author believes and seeks to shew that every new discovery tends more strongly to prove that Nature and the Bible have One Author. “Whether the reader agree or not with his conclusions, he will acknowledge he is in the presence of an original and thoughtful writer.”—Pall Mall Gazette. “There is no class of educated men and women that will not profit by these essays.”—Standard.*

Maurice.—Works by the late Rev. F. DENISON MAURICE, M.A., Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Cambridge.

Professor Maurice's Works are recognized as having made a deep impression on modern theology. With whatever subject he dealt he tried to look at it in its bearing on living men and their everyday surroundings, and faced unshrinkingly the difficulties which occur to ordinary earnest thinkers in a manner that showed he had intense sympathy with all that concerns humanity. By all who wish to understand the various drifts of thought during the present century, Mr. Maurice's works must be studied. An intimate friend of Mr. Maurice's, one who has carefully studied all his works, and had besides many opportunities of knowing the Author's opinions, in speaking of his so-called "obscurity," ascribes it to "the never-failing assumption that God is really moving, teaching and acting; and that the writer's business is not so much to state something for the reader's benefit, as to apprehend what God is saying or doing." The Spectator says—"Few of those of our own generation whose names will live in English history or literature have exerted so profound and so permanent an influence as Mr. Maurice."

THE PATRIARCHS AND LAWGIVERS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT. Third and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 5s.

The Nineteen Discourses contained in this volume were preached in the chapel of Lincoln's Inn during the year 1851. The texts are taken from the books of Genesis, Exodus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, Joshua, Judges, and Samuel, and involve some of the most interesting biblical topics discussed in recent times.

THE PROPHETS AND KINGS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT. Third Edition, with new Preface. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The previous work brings down Old Testament history to the time of Samuel. The Sermons contained in the present volume—twenty-seven in number, coming down to the time of Ezekiel—though they commence at that point are distinct in their subject and treatment. Mr. Maurice, in the spirit which animated the compilers of the Church Lessons, has in these Sermons regarded the Prophets more as preachers of righteousness than as mere predictors—an aspect of their lives which, he thinks, has been greatly overlooked in our day, and than which, there is none we have more need to contemplate. He has found that the Old Testament Prophets, taken in their simple natural sense, clear up many of the difficulties which beset us in the daily work of life; make the past intelligible, the present endurable, and the future real and hopeful.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN.

A Series of Lectures on the Gospel of St. Luke. Crown 8vo. 9s.

Mr. Maurice, in his Preface to these Twenty-eight Lectures, says,—"In these Lectures I have endeavoured to ascertain what is told us respecting the life of Jesus by one of those Evangelists who proclaim Him to be the Christ, who says that He did come from a Father, that He did baptize with the Holy Spirit, that He did rise from the dead. I have chosen the one who is most directly connected with the later history of the Church, who was not an Apostle, who professedly wrote for the use of a man already instructed in the faith of the Apostles. I have followed the course of the writer's narrative, not changing it under any pretext. I have adhered to his phraseology, striving to avoid the substitution of any other for his."

THE GOSPEL OF ST. JOHN. A Series of Discourses.

Third and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

These Discourses, twenty-eight in number, are of a nature similar to those on the Gospel of St. Luke, and will be found to render valuable assistance to any one anxious to understand the Gospel of the beloved disciple, so different in many respects from those of the other three Evangelists. Appended are eleven notes illustrating various points which occur throughout the discourses. The Literary Churchman thus speaks of this volume:—"Thorough honesty, reverence, and deep thought pervade the work, which is every way solid and philosophical, as well as theological, and abounding with suggestions which the patient student may draw out more at length for himself."

THE EPISTLES OF ST. JOHN. A Series of Lectures on Christian Ethics. Second and Cheaper Edition. Cr. 8vo. 6s.

These Lectures on Christian Ethics were delivered to the students of the Working Men's College, Great Ormond Street, London, on a series of Sunday mornings. There are twenty Lectures in all, founded on various texts taken from the Epistles of St. John, which abound in passages bearing directly on the conduct of life, the duty of men to God and to each other. It will be found that a very complete system of practical morality is developed in this volume, in which the most important points in Ethics are set forth in an unconventional and interesting manner. Mr. Maurice believes that the question in which we are most interested, the question which most affects our studies and our daily lives, is the question, whether there is a foundation for human morality, or whether it is dependent upon the opinions and fashions of different ages and countries. This important question will be found amply and fairly discussed in this volume, which the National Review calls "Mr. Maurice's most effective and instructive work. He is peculiarly fitted by the constitution of his mind, to throw light on St. John's writings." Appended is a note on "Positivism and its Teacher."

EXPOSITORY SERMONS ON THE PRAYER-BOOK.

The Prayer-book considered especially in reference to the Romish System. Second Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 5s. 6d.

After an Introductory Sermon, Mr. Maurice goes over the various parts of the Church Service, expounds in eighteen Sermons, their intention and significance, and shews how appropriate they are as expressions of the deepest longings and wants of all classes of men.

mysterious Book in the Bible, do not demand that extensive knowledge of ancient or modern history which it is necessary to possess to be able to judge of most modern commentaries on Prophecy. Mr. Maurice, instead of trying to find far-fetched allusions to great historical events in the distant future, endeavours to discover the plain, literal, obvious meaning of the words of the writer, and shews that as a rule these refer to events contemporaneous with or immediately succeeding the time when the book was written. At the same time he shews the applicability of the contents of the book to the circumstances of the present day and of all times. "Never," says the Nonconformist, "has Mr. Maurice been more reverent, more careful for the letter of the Scripture, more discerning of the purpose of the Spirit, or more sober and practical in his teaching, than in this volume on the Apocalypse."

WHAT IS REVELATION? A Series of Sermons on the Epiphany; to which are added, Letters to a Theological Student on the Bampton Lectures of Mr. Mansel. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

Both Sermons and Letters were called forth by the doctrine maintained by Mr. Mansel in his Bampton Lectures, that Revelation cannot be a direct Manifestation of the Infinite Nature of God. Mr. Maurice maintains the opposite doctrine, and in his Sermons explains why, in spite of the high authorities on the other side, he must still assert the principle which he discovers in the Services of the Church and throughout the Bible. In the Letters to a Student of Theology, he has followed out all Mr. Mansel's Statements and Arguments step by step. The Nonconformist says, "There will be found ample materials to stimulate Christian faith and earnestness, to quicken and give tenderness to charity, and to vivify conceptions of the 'things not seen which are eternal.'"

SEQUEL TO THE INQUIRY, "WHAT IS REVELATION?" Letters in Reply to Mr. Mansel's Examination of "Strictures on the Bampton Lectures." Crown 8vo. 6s.

This, as the title indicates, was called forth by Mr. Mansel's Examination of Mr. Maurice's Strictures on his doctrine of the Infinite.

THEOLOGICAL ESSAYS. Third Edition. Crown 8vo.
10s. 6d.

"The book," says Mr. Maurice, "expresses thoughts which have been working in my mind for years; the method of it has not been adopted carelessly; even the composition has undergone frequent revision." There are seventeen Essays in all, and although meant primarily for Unitarians, to quote the words of the Clerical Journal, "it leaves untouched scarcely any topic which is in agitation in the religious world; scarcely a moot point between our various sects; scarcely a plot of debateable ground between Christians and Infidels, between Romanists and Protestants, between Socinians and other Christians, between English Churchmen and Dissenters on both sides. Scarce is there a misgiving, a difficulty, an aspiration stirring amongst us now,—now, when men seem in earnest as hardly ever before about religion, and ask and demand satisfaction with a fearlessness which seems almost awful when one thinks what is at stake—which is not recognised and grappled with by Mr. Maurice."

THE DOCTRINE OF SACRIFICE DEDUCED FROM THE SCRIPTURES. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Throughout the Nineteen Sermons contained in this volume, Mr. Maurice expounds the ideas which he has formed of the Doctrine of Sacrifice, as it is set forth in various parts of the Bible. "The habitual tone," says the Christian Spectator, "is that of great seriousness and calm,—a seriousness which makes an impression of its own, and a serenity which is only broken by some overpowering feeling forcing itself into expression, and making itself heard in most meaning and stirring words."

THE RELIGIONS OF THE WORLD, AND THEIR RELATIONS TO CHRISTIANITY. Fourth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 5s.

The second four Lectures are occupied with a discussion of the questions, "In what relation does Christianity stand to these different faiths? If there be a faith which is meant for mankind, is this the one, or must we look for another?" In the Preface, the most important authorities on the various subjects discussed in the Lectures are referred to, so that the reader may pursue the subject further.*

ON THE LORD'S PRAYER. Fourth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

In these Nine Sermons the successive petitions of the Lord's Prayer are taken up by Mr. Maurice, their significance expounded, and, as was usual with him, connected with the every-day lives, feelings, and aspirations of the men of the present time. They were delivered in the momentous year 1848, and frequent allusions are made and lessons drawn from the events of that year.

ON THE SABBATH DAY; the Character of the Warrior, and on the Interpretation of History. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

This volume contains Three Sermons on the Sabbath-day, one of them being in reference to the proposed opening of the Crystal Palace on Sunday—one on the "Character of the Warrior," suggested by the Death of the Duke of Wellington; the fifth being on "The Divine Interpretation of History," delivered during the Great Exhibition of 1851. In this last Mr. Maurice points out a few difficulties which, judging from his own experience, he thinks likely to perplex students of history, explaining how the Bible has anticipated and resolved them.

THE GROUND AND OBJECT OF HOPE FOR MANKIND. Four Sermons preached before the University of Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

THE LORD'S PRAYER, THE CREED, AND THE COMMANDMENTS. A Manual for Parents and Schoolmasters. To which is added the Order of the Scriptures. 18mo. cloth limp. 1s.

This book is not written for clergymen, as such, but for parents and teachers, who are often either prejudiced against the contents of the Catechism, or regard it peculiarly as the clergyman's book, but, at the same time, have a general notion that a habit of prayer ought to be cultivated, that there are some things which ought to be believed, and some things which ought to be done. It will be found to be peculiarly valuable at the present time, when the question of religious education is occupying so much attention.

THE CLAIMS OF THE BIBLE AND OF SCIENCE. A Correspondence on some Questions respecting the Pentateuch. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

This volume consists of a series of Fifteen Letters, the first and last addressed by a 'Layman' to Mr. Maurice, the intervening thirteen written by Mr. Maurice himself.

DIALOGUES ON FAMILY WORSHIP. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"The parties in these Dialogues," says the Preface, "are a Clergyman who accepts the doctrines of the Church, and a Layman whose faith in them is nearly gone. The object of the Dialogues is not confutation, but the discovery of a ground on which two Englishmen and two fathers may stand, and on which their country and their children may stand when their places know them no more." Some of the most important doctrines of the Church are discussed, the whole series of dialogues tending to shew that men of all shades of belief may look up to and worship God as their common and loving Father.

THE COMMANDMENTS CONSIDERED AS INSTRUMENTS OF NATIONAL REFORMATION. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

This is a book of practical morality and divinity. It was to some extent occasioned by Dr. Norman Macleod's Speech on the Sabbath, and his views of the Commandments. The author endeavours to shew that the Commandments are now, and ever have been, the great protesters against Presbyteral and Prelatical assumptions, and that if we do not receive them as Commandments of the Lord God spoken to Israel, and spoken to every people under heaven now, we lose the greatest witnesses we possess for national morality and civil freedom.

MORAL AND METAPHYSICAL PHILOSOPHY. Vol. I. Ancient Philosophy from the First to the Thirteenth Centuries. Vol. II. Fourteenth Century and the French Revolution, with a Glimpse into the Nineteenth Century. Two Vols. 8vo. 25s.

This is an edition in two volumes of Professor Maurice's History of Philosophy from the earliest period to the present time. It was formerly issued in a number of separate volumes, and it is believed that all admirers of the author and all students of philosophy will welcome this compact edition. In a long introduction to this edition, in the form of a dialogue, Professor Maurice justifies his own views, and touches upon some of the most important topics of the time.

SOCIAL MORALITY. Twenty-one Lectures delivered in the University of Cambridge. New and Cheaper Edition. Cr. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

In this series of Lectures, Professor Maurice considers, historically and critically, Social Morality in its three main aspects:—I. "The Relations which spring from the Family—Domestic Morality." II. "Relations which subsist among the various constituents of a Nation—National Morality." III. "As it concerns Universal Humanity—Universal Morality." Appended to each series is a chapter on "Worship;" first, "Family Worship;" second,

"National Worship," third, "Universal Worship." "Whilst reading it we are charmed by the freedom from exclusiveness and prejudice, the large charity, the loftiness of thought, the eagerness to recognise and appreciate whatever there is of real worth extant in the world, which animates it from one end to the other. We gain new thoughts and new ways of viewing things, even more, perhaps, from being brought for a time under the influence of so noble and spiritual a mind."—Athenæum.

THE CONSCIENCE: Lectures on Casuistry, delivered in the University of Cambridge. Second and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 5s.

In this series of nine Lectures, Professor Maurice, endeavours to settle what is meant by the word "Conscience," and discusses the most important questions immediately connected with the subject. Taking "Casuistry" in its old sense as being the "study of cases of Conscience," he endeavours to show in what way it may be brought to bear at the present day upon the acts and thoughts of our ordinary existence. He shows that Conscience asks for laws, not rules; for freedom, not chains; for education, not suppression. He has abstained from the use of philosophical terms, and has touched on philosophical systems only when he fancied "they were interfering with the rights and duties of wayfarers." The Saturday Review says: "We rise from the perusal of these lectures with a detestation of all that is selfish and mean, and with a living impression that there is such a thing as goodness after all."

LECTURES ON THE ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY OF THE FIRST AND SECOND CENTURIES. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The work contains a series of graphic sketches and vivid portraits, bringing forcibly before the reader the life of the early Church in all its main aspects. In the first chapter on "The Jewish Calling," besides expounding his idea of the true nature of a "Church," the author gives a brief sketch of the position and economy of the Jews; while in the second he points out their relation to "the other Nations." Chapter Third contains a succinct account of the various Jewish

Sects, while in Chapter Fourth are briefly set forth Mr. Maurice's ideas of the character of Christ and the nature of His mission, and a sketch of events is given up to the Day of Pentecost. The remaining Chapters, extending from the Apostles' personal Ministry to the end of the Second Century, contain sketches of the character and work of all the prominent men in any way connected with the Early Church, accounts of the origin and nature of the various doctrines orthodox and heretical which had their birth during the period, as well as of the planting and early history of the Chief Churches in Asia, Africa and Europe.

LEARNING AND WORKING. Six Lectures delivered in Willis's Rooms, London, in June and July, 1854.—THE RELIGION OF ROME, and its Influence on Modern Civilisation. Four Lectures delivered in the Philosophical Institution of Edinburgh, in December, 1854. Crown 8vo. 5s.

In the Dedication and Preface to this volume, Professor Maurice shows that these two sets of Lectures have many points of connection. In the first series of Lectures the author endeavours to explain to such an audience as was likely to meet in Willis's Rooms, the scope and aims of the course of education established at the then recently founded Working Men's College, and at the same time expounds his notions of education in general, the pivot of his system being the truth that Learning and Working are not incompatible. The title to the second series is a sufficient index to their nature.

Moorhouse.—Works by JAMES MOORHOUSE, M.A., Vicar of Paddington :—

SOME MODERN DIFFICULTIES RESPECTING the FACTS OF NATURE AND REVELATION. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

The first of these Four Discourses is a systematic reply to the Essay of the Rev. Baden Powell on Christian Evidences in "Essays and Reviews." The fourth Sermon, on "The Resurrection," is in some measure complementary to this, and the two together are intended to furnish a tolerably complete view of modern objections to Revelation. In the second and third Sermons, on the "Temptation" and "Passion," the author has endeavoured "to exhibit the power and wonder of those great facts within the spiritual sphere, which modern theorists have especially sought to discredit." The British Quarterly says of them,—"The tone of the discussion is able, and throughout conservative of Scriptural truth."

JACOB. Three Sermons preached before the University of Cambridge in Lent 1870. Extra fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

In these Three Sermons the author endeavours to indicate the course of that Divine training by which the patriarch Jacob was converted from a deceitful and unscrupulous into a pious and self-denying man. In the first Sermon is considered "The Human Subject," or the nature to be trained; in the second "The Divine Power," the power by which that training was effected; and in the third "The Great Change," or the course and form of the training.

THE HULSEAN LECTURES FOR 1865. Cr. 8vo. 5s.

The following are the subjects of the Four Hulsean Lectures in this volume:—I. "Bearing of Present Controversies on the Doctrine of the Incarnation." II. "How far the Hypothesis of a real Limitation in our Saviour's Human Knowledge is consistent with the Doctrine of His Divinity." III. "The Scriptural Evidence of our Saviour's Sinlessness." IV. "What Kind and Degree of Human Ignorance were left possible to our Lord Jesus Christ by the fact of His Human Sinlessness." "Few more valuable works have come into our hands for many years . . . a most fruitful and welcome volume."—Church Review.

O'Brien.—AN ATTEMPT TO EXPLAIN and ESTABLISH THE DOCTRINE OF JUSTIFICATION by FAITH ONLY. By JAMES THOMAS O'BRIEN, D.D., Bishop of Ossory. Third Edition. 8vo. 12s.

This work consists of Ten Sermons. The first four treat of the nature and mutual relations of Faith and Justification; the fifth and sixth examine the corruptions of the doctrine of Justification by Faith only, and the objections which have been urged against it. The four concluding sermons deal with the moral effects of Faith. Various Notes are added explanatory of the Author's reasoning.

Palgrave.—HYMNS. By FRANCIS TURNER PALGRAVE.
Third Edition, enlarged. 18mo. 1s. 6d.

This is a collection of twenty original Hymns, which the Literary Churchman speaks of as "so choice, so perfect, and so refined,—so tender in feeling, and so scholarly in expression."

Palmer.—THE BOOK OF PRAISE: From the Best English Hymn Writers. Selected and arranged by Lord SELBORNE.
With Vignette by WOOLNER. 18mo. 4s. 6d.

The present is an attempt to present, under a convenient arrangement, a collection of such examples of a copious and interesting branch of popular literature, as, after several years' study of the subject, have seemed to the Editor most worthy of being separated from the mass to which they belong. It has been the Editor's desire and aim to adhere strictly, in all cases in which it could be ascertained, to the genuine uncorrupted text of the authors themselves. The names of the authors and date of composition of the hymns, when known, are affixed, while notes are added to the volume, giving further details. The Hymns are arranged according to subjects. "There is not room for two opinions as to the value of the 'Book of Praise.'" —Guardian. "Approaches as nearly as one can conceive to perfection."—Nonconformist.

BOOK OF PRAISE HYMNAL. See end of this Catalogue.

Paul of Tarsus. An Inquiry into the Times and the Gospel of the Apostle of the Gentiles. By a GRADUATE. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The Author of this work has attempted, out of the materials which were at his disposal, to construct for himself a sketch of the time in which St. Paul lived, of the religious systems with which he was brought in contact, of the doctrine which he taught, and of the work which he ultimately achieved. "Turn where we will throughout the volume, we find the best fruit of patient inquiry, sound scholarship, logical argument, and fairness of conclusion. No thoughtful reader will rise from its perusal without a real and lasting profit to himself, and a sense of permanent addition to the cause of truth."—Standard.

Prescott.—THE THREEFOLD CORD. Sermons preached before the University of Cambridge. By J. E. PRESCOTT, B.D. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The title of this volume is derived from the subjects of the first three of these Sermons—Love, Hope, Faith. Their full titles are:— I. "Christ the Bringer of Peace—Love." II. "Christ the Renovator—Hope." III. "Christ the Light—Faith." The fourth, an Assize Sermon, is on "The Divinity of Justice." The Sermons are an attempt to shew that Christian theology is sufficient for the wants of the present day.

Procter.—A HISTORY OF THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER: With a Rationale of its Offices. By FRANCIS PROCTER, M.A. Tenth Edition, revised and enlarged. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The fact that in fifteen years nine editions of this volume have been called for, shews that such a work was wanted, and that to a large extent Mr. Procter's book has supplied the want. "In the course of the last thirty years," the author says, "the whole subject has been investigated by divines of great learning, and it was mainly with a view of epitomizing their extensive publications, and correcting by their help sundry traditional errors or misconceptions, that the present volume was put together." The Second Part is occupied with an account of "The Sources and Rationale of the Offices." The Athenæum says:—"The origin of every part of the Prayer-book has been diligently investigated,—and there are few questions or facts connected with it which are not either sufficiently explained, or so referred to, that persons interested may work out the truth for themselves."

Procter and Maclear.—AN ELEMENTARY INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER. Fourth Edition, Re-arranged and Supplemented by an Explanation of the Morning and Evening Prayer and the Litany. By F. PROCTER, M.A. and G. F. MACLEAR, D.D. 18mo. 2s. 6d.

This book has the same object and follows the same plan as the Manuals already noticed under Mr. Maclear's name. Each book is subdivided into chapters and sections. In Book I. is given a detailed History of the Book of Common Prayer down to the Attempted Revision in the Reign of William III. Book II., consisting of four Parts, treats in order the various parts of the Prayer Book. Valuable Notes, etymological, historical, and critical, are given throughout the book, while the Appendix contains several articles of much interest and importance. Appended is a General Index and an Index of Words explained in the Notes. The Literary Churchman characterizes it as "by far the completest and most satisfactory book of its kind we know. We wish it were in the hands of every schoolboy and every schoolmaster in the kingdom."

Psalms of David CHRONOLOGICALLY ARRANGED.

An Amended Version, with Historical Introductions and Explanatory Notes. By FOUR FRIENDS. Second and Cheaper Edition, much enlarged. Crown 8vo. 8s. 6d.

One of the chief designs of the Editors, in preparing this volume, was to restore the Psalter as far as possible to the order in which the Psalms were written. They give the division of each Psalm into strophes, and of each strophe into the lines which composed it, and amend the errors of translation. In accomplishing this work they have mainly followed the guidance of Professor Henry Ewald. A Supplement contains the chief specimens of Hebrew Lyric poetry not included in the Book of Psalms. The Spectator calls it "One of the most instructive and valuable books that have been published for many years."

Golden Treasury Psalter.—THE STUDENT'S EDITION.

Being an Edition with briefer Notes of the above. 18mo. 3s. 6d.

This volume will be found to meet the requirements of those who wish for a smaller edition of the larger work, at a lower price for family use, and for the use of younger pupils in Public Schools. The short notes which are appended to the volume will, it is hoped, suffice to make the meaning intelligible throughout. The aim of this edition is simply to put the reader as far as possible in possession of the plain meaning of the writer. "It is a gem," the Nonconformist says.

Ramsay.—THE CATECHISER'S MANUAL; or, the Church Catechism Illustrated and Explained, for the Use of Clergymen, Schoolmasters, and Teachers. By ARTHUR RAMSAY, M.A. Second Edition. 18mo. 1s. 6d.

This Manual, which is in the form of question and answer, is intended to afford full assistance both to learners and teachers, to candidates for Confirmation as well as to clergymen, in the understanding of the Church Catechism, and of all the matters referred to therein.

Rays of Sunlight for Dark Days. A Book of Selections for the Suffering. With a Preface by C. J. VAUGHAN, D.D. 18mo. Fifth Edition. 3s. 6d. Also in morocco, old style.

Dr. Vaughan says in the Preface, after speaking of the general run of Books of Comfort for Mourners, "It is because I think that the little volume now offered to the Christian sufferer is one of greater wisdom and of deeper experience, that I have readily consented to the request that I would introduce it by a few words of Preface." The book consists of a series of very brief extracts from a great variety of authors, in prose and poetry, suited to the many moods of a mourning or suffering mind. "Mostly gems of the first water."—Clerical Journal.

Reynolds.—NOTES OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE. A Selection of Sermons by HENRY ROBERT REYNOLDS, B.A., President of Cheshunt College, and Fellow of University College, London. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

This work may be taken as representative of the mode of thought and feeling which is most popular amongst the freer and more cultivated

Nonconformists. "The reader throughout," says the Patriot, "feels himself in the grasp of an earnest and careful thinker." "It is long," says the Nonconformist, "since we have met with any published sermons better calculated than these to stimulate devout thought, and to bring home to the soul the reality of a spiritual life."

Roberts.—DISCUSSIONS ON THE GOSPELS. By the Rev. ALEXANDER ROBERTS, D.D. Second Edition, revised and enlarged. 8vo. 16s.

This volume is divided into two parts. Part I. "On the Language employed by our Lord and His Disciples," in which the author endeavours to prove that Greek was the language usually employed by Christ Himself, in opposition to the common belief that Our Lord spoke Aramæan. Part II. is occupied with a discussion "On the Original Language of St. Matthew's Gospel," and on "The Origin and Authenticity of the Gospels." "The author brings the valuable qualifications of learning, temper, and an independent judgment."—Daily News.

Robertson.—PASTORAL COUNSELS. Being Chapters on Practical and Devotional Subjects. By the late JOHN ROBERTSON, D.D. Third Edition, with a Preface by the Author of "The Recreations of a Country Parson." Extra fcap. 8vo. 6s.

These Sermons are the free utterances of a strong and independent thinker. He does not depart from the essential doctrines of his Church, but he expounds them in a spirit of the widest charity, and always having most prominently in view the requirements of practical life. "The sermons are admirable specimens of a practical, earnest, and instructive style of pulpit teaching."—Nonconformist.

Rowsell.—MAN'S LABOUR AND GOD'S HARVEST. Sermons preached before the University of Cambridge in Lent, 1861. Fcap. 8vo. 3s.

This volume contains Five Sermons, the general drift of which is indicated by the title. "We strongly recommend this little volume to young men, and especially to those who are contemplating work- ing for Christ in Holy Orders.—Literary Churchman. “Mr. Rowse’s Sermons must, we feel sure, have touched the heart of many a Cambridge Undergraduate, and are deserving of a wide general circulation.”—The Ecclesiastic.

Salmon.—THE REIGN OF LAW, and other Sermons, preached in the Chapel of Trinity College, Dublin. By the Rev. GEORGE SALMON, D.D., Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Dublin. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Sanday.—THE AUTHORSHIP AND HISTORICAL CHARACTER OF THE FOURTH GOSPEL, considered in reference to the Contents of the Gospel itself. A Critical Essay. By WILLIAM SANDAY, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. 8s. 6d.

The object of this Essay is critical and nothing more. The Author attempts to apply faithfully and persistently to the contents of the much disputed fourth Gospel that scientific method which has been so successful in other directions. “The facts of religion,” the Author believes, “(i.e. the documents, the history of religious bodies, &c.) are as much facts as the lie of a coal-bed or the formation of a coral-reef.” “The Essay is not only most valuable in itself, but full of promise for the future.”—Canon Westcott in the Academy.

Sergeant.—SERMONS. By the Rev. E. W. SERGEANT, M.A., Balliol College, Oxford; Assistant Master at Westminster College. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

This volume contains Nine Sermons on a variety of topics, preached by the author at various times and to various classes of hearers. The First Sermon is on Free Inquiry.

Smith.—PROPHECY A PREPARATION FOR CHRIST. Eight Lectures preached before the University of Oxford, being the Bampton Lectures for 1869. By R. PAYNE SMITH, D.D., Dean of Canterbury. Second and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The author’s object in these Lectures is to shew that there exists in the Old Testament an element, which no criticism on naturalistic principles can either account for or explain away: that element is Prophecy. The author endeavours to prove that its force does not consist merely in its predictions. The Bible describes man's first estate of innocence, his fall, and the promise given by God of his restoration. Virtually the promise meant that God would give man a true religion; and the author asserts that Christianity is the sole religion on earth that fulfils the conditions necessary to constitute a true religion. God has pledged His own attributes in its behalf; this pledge He has given in miracle and prophecy. The author endeavours to shew the reality of that portion of the proof founded on prophecy. "These Lectures overflow with solid learning."—Record.

Smith.—CHRISTIAN FAITH. Sermons preached before the University of Cambridge. By W. SAUMAREZ SMITH, M.A., Principal of St. Aidan's College, Birkenhead. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Appropriate and earnest sermons, suited to the practical exhortation of an educated congregation."—Guardian.*

Stanley.—Works by the Very Rev. A. P. STANLEY, D.D., Dean of Westminster.

THE ATHANASIAN CREED, with a Preface on the General Recommendations of the RITUAL COMMISSION. Cr. 8vo. 2s.

The object of the work is not so much to urge the omission or change of the Athanasian Creed, as to shew that such a relaxation ought to give offence to no reasonable or religious mind. With this view, the Dean of Westminster discusses in succession—(1) the Authorship of the Creed, (2) its Internal Characteristics, (3) the Peculiarities of its Use in the Church of England, (4) its Advantages and Disadvantages, (5) its various Interpretations, and (6) the Judgment passed upon it by the Ritual Commission. In conclusion, Dr. Stanley maintains that the use of the Athanasian

Creed should no longer be made compulsory. "Dr. Stanley puts with admirable force the objections which may be made to the Creed; equally admirable, we think, in his statement of its advantages."—Spectator.

THE NATIONAL THANKSGIVING. Sermons preached in Westminster Abbey. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

These Sermons are (1) "Death and Life," preached December 10, 1871; (2) "The Trumpet of Patmos," December 17, 1871; (3) "The Day of Thanksgiving," March 3, 1872. It is hoped that these Sermons may recall, in some degree, the serious reflections connected with the Prince of Wales's illness, which, if the nation is true to itself, ought not to perish with the moment. The proceeds of the publication will be devoted to the Fund for the Restoration of St. Paul's Cathedral. "In point of fervour and polish by far the best specimens in print of Dean Stanley's eloquent style."—Standard.

Sunday Library. See end of this Catalogue.

THE AUTHORITY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT, and other LECTURES, delivered before the University of Cambridge. 8vo. cloth. 12s.

*the Apostles of Jesus," "The Inspiration of God's Servants," "The Human Character of the Inspired Writers," and "The Divine Character of the Word written." Taylor.—THE RESTORATION OF BELIEF. New and Revised Edition. By ISAAC TAYLOR, Esq. Crown 8vo. 8s. 6d.

The earlier chapters are occupied with an examination of the primitive history of the Christian Religion, and its relation to the Roman government; and here, as well as in the remainder of the work, the author shews the bearing of that history on some of the difficult and interesting questions which have recently been claiming the attention of all earnest men. The book will be found to contain a clear and full statement of the case as it at present stands in behalf of Christianity. The last chapter of this New Edition treats of "The Present Position of the Argument concerning Christianity," with special reference to M. Renan's Vie de Jésus. The Journal of Sacred Literature says,—"The current of thought which runs through this book is calm and clear, its tone is earnest, its manner courteous. The author has carefully studied the successive problems which he so ably handles."

Christ; "Great Men," "Faith," "Doubts," "Scruples," "Original Sin," "Friendship," "Helping Others," "The Discipline of Temptation," "Strength a Duty," "Worldliness," "Ill Temper," "The Burial of the Past." The Critic speaks of them thus:—"We trust that the tender affectionate spirit of practical Christianity which runs through every page of the volume will have its due effect. . . . desiring to rouse the youthful hearers to a sense of duty, and to arm them against the perils and dangers of the world against which they are so soon to battle."

A SECOND SERIES OF SERMONS PREACHED IN THE CHAPEL OF RUGBY SCHOOL. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 6s.

A THIRD SERIES OF SERMONS PREACHED IN RUGBY SCHOOL CHAPEL IN 1867—1869. Extra fcap. 8vo. 6s.

*This third series of Bishop Temple's Rugby Sermons, contains thirty-six brief discourses, characterized by "a penetrating and direct practicalness, informed by a rare intuitive sympathy with boy-nature; its keen perception of reality and earnestness, its equally keen sympathy with what is noblest in sentiment and feelings." Thring.—Works by Rev. EDWARD THRING, M.A.

SERMONS DELIVERED AT UPPINGHAM SCHOOL.

Crown 8vo. 5s.

In this volume are contained Forty-seven brief Sermons, all on subjects more or less intimately connected with Public-school life. "We desire very highly to commend these capital Sermons which treat of a boy's life and trials in a thoroughly practical way and with great simplicity and impressiveness. They deserve to be classed with the best of their kind."—Literary Churchman.

THOUGHTS ON LIFE-SCIENCE. New Edition, enlarged and revised. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

In this volume are discussed in a familiar manner some of the most interesting problems between Science and Religion, Reason and Feeling. "Learning and Science," says the Author, "are claiming the right of building up and pulling down everything, especially the latter. It has seemed to me no useless task to look steadily at what has happened, to take stock as it were of man's gains, and to endeavour amidst new circumstances to arrive at some rational estimate of the bearings of things, so that the limits of what is possible at all events may be clearly marked out for ordinary readers. . . . This book is an endeavour to bring out some of the main facts of the world."

Tracts for Priests and People. By VARIOUS WRITERS.

THE FIRST SERIES. Crown 8vo. 8s.

THE SECOND SERIES. Crown 8vo. 8s.

The whole Series of Fifteen Tracts may be had separately, price One Shilling each.

A series of papers written after the excitement aroused by the publication of "Essays and Reviews" had somewhat abated, and designed, by the exposition of positive truth, to meet the religious difficulties of honest inquirers. Amongst the writers are Mr. Thomas Hughes, Professor Maurice, the Rev. J. Llewellyn Davies, and Mr. J. M. Ludlow.

Trench.—Works by R. CHENEVIX TRENCH, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin. (For other Works by the same author, see BIOGRAPHICAL, BELLES LETTRES, and LINGUISTIC CATALOGUES).

Archbishop Trench is well known as a writer who has the happy faculty of being able to take with discrimination the results of the highest criticism and scholarship, and present them in such a shape as will be not only valuable to scholars, but interesting, intelligible, and of the greatest use even to the ordinary reader. It is generally acknowledged that few men have been more successful in bringing out the less obvious meanings of the New Testament, or done more for the popular yet scholarly exposition of the Bible generally.

NOTES ON THE PARABLES OF OUR LORD.

Eleventh Edition. 8vo. 12s.

This work has taken its place as a standard exposition and interpretation of Christ's Parables. The book is prefaced by an Introductory Essay in four chapters:—I. On the definition of the Parable. II. On Teaching by Parables. III. On the Interpretation of the Parables. IV. On other Parables besides those in the Scriptures. The author then proceeds to take up the Parables one by one, and by the aid of philology, history, antiquities, and the researches of travellers, shews forth the significance, beauty, and applicability of each, concluding with what he deems its true moral interpretation. In the numerous Notes are many valuable references, illustrative quotations, critical and philological annotations, etc., and appended to the volume is a classified list of fifty-six works on the Parables.

NOTES ON THE MIRACLES OF OUR LORD.

Ninth Edition. 8vo. 12s.

In the 'Preliminary Essay' to this work, all the momentous and interesting questions that have been raised in connection with Miracles, are discussed with considerable fulness, and the author's usual candour and learning. The Essay consists of six chapters:—I. On the Names of Miracles, i. e. the Greek words by which they are designated in the New Testament. II. The Miracles

and Nature—What is the difference between a Miracle and any event in the ordinary course of Nature? III. The Authority of Miracles—Is the Miracle to command absolute obedience? IV. The Evangelical, compared with the other cycles of Miracles. V. The Assaults on the Miracles—1. The Jewish. 2. The Heathen (Celsus etc.). 3. The Pantheistic (Spinoza etc.). 4. The Sceptical (Hume). 5. The Miracles only relatively miraculous (Schleiermacher). 6. The Rationalistic (Paulus). 7. The Historico-Critical (Woolston, Strauss). VI. The Apologetic Worth of the Miracles. The author then treats the separate Miracles as he does the Parables.

SYNONYMS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT. New Edition, enlarged. 8vo. cloth. 12s.

The study of synonyms in any language is valuable as a discipline for training the mind to close and accurate habits of thought; more especially is this the case in Greek—"a language spoken by a people of the finest and subtlest intellect; who saw distinctions where others saw none; who divided out to different words what others often were content to huddle confusedly under a common term. . . . Where is it so desirable that we should miss nothing, that we should lose no finer intention of the writer, as in those words which are the vehicles of the very mind of God Himself?" This work is recognised as a valuable companion to every student of the New Testament in the original. This, the Seventh Edition, has been carefully revised, and a considerable number of new synonyms added. Appended is an Index to the Synonyms, and an Index to many other words alluded to or explained throughout the work. "He is," the Athenæum says, "a guide in this department of knowledge to whom his readers may intrust themselves with confidence. His sober judgment and sound sense are barriers against the misleading influence of arbitrary hypotheses."

ON THE AUTHORIZED VERSION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT. Second Edition. 8vo. 7s.

Archbishop Trench's familiarity with the New Testament makes him peculiarly fitted to estimate the value of the present translation, and to give directions as to how a new one should be proceeded with. After some Introductory Remarks, in which the propriety of a revision is briefly discussed, the whole question of the merits of the present version is gone into in detail, in eleven chapters. Appended is a chronological list of works bearing on the subject, an Index of the principal Texts considered, an Index of Greek Words, and an Index of other Words referred to throughout the book.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPELS. Second Edition. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

This book is published under the conviction that the assertion often made is untrue,—viz. that the Gospels are in the main plain and easy, and that all the chief difficulties of the New Testament are to be found in the Epistles. These "Studies," sixteen in number, are the fruit of a much larger scheme, and each Study deals with some important episode mentioned in the Gospels, in a critical, philosophical, and practical manner. Many learned references and quotations are added to the Notes. Among the subjects treated are:—The Temptation; Christ and the Samaritan Woman; The Three Aspirants; The Transfiguration; Zacchæus; The True Vine; The Penitent Malefactor; Christ and the Two Disciples on the way to Emmaus.

COMMENTARY ON THE EPISTLES to the SEVEN CHURCHES IN ASIA. Third Edition, revised. 8vo. 8s. 6d.

The present work consists of an Introduction, being a commentary on Rev. i. 4—20, a detailed examination of each of the Seven Epistles, in all its bearings, and an Excursus on the Historico-Prophetical Interpretation of the Epistles.

THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT. An Exposition drawn from the writings of St. Augustine, with an Essay on his merits as an Interpreter of Holy Scripture. Third Edition, enlarged. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The first half of the present work consists of a dissertation in eight chapters on "Augustine as an Interpreter of Scripture," the titles of the several chapters being as follow:—I. Augustine's General Views of Scripture and its Interpretation. II. The External Helps for the Interpretation of Scripture possessed by Augustine. III. Augustine's Principles and Canons of Interpretation. IV. Augustine's Allegorical Interpretation of Scripture. V. Illustrations of Augustine's Skill as an Interpreter of Scripture. VI. Augustine on John the Baptist and on St. Stephen. VII. Augustine on the Epistle to the Romans. VIII. Miscellaneous Examples of Augustine's Interpretation of Scripture. The latter half of the work consists of Augustine's Exposition of the Sermon on the Mount, not however a mere series of quotations from Augustine, but a connected account of his sentiments on the various passages of that Sermon, interspersed with criticisms by Archbishop Trench.

SERMONS PREACHED in WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

Second Edition. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

These Sermons embrace a wide variety of topics, and are thoroughly practical, earnest, and evangelical, and simple in style. The following are a few of the subjects:—"Tercentenary Celebration of Queen Elizabeth's Accession;" "Conviction and Conversion;" "The Incredulity of Thomas;" "The Angels' Hymn;" "Counting the Cost;" "The Holy Trinity in Relation to our Prayers;" "On the Death of General Havelock;" "Christ Weeping over Jerusalem;" "Walking with Christ in White."

SHIPWRECKS OF FAITH. Three Sermons preached before the University of Cambridge in May, 1867. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

These Sermons are especially addressed to young men. The subjects are "Balaam," "Saul," and "Judas Iscariot," three of the mournfullest lives recorded in Scripture, "for the greatness of their vocation, and their disastrous falling short of the same, for the utter defeat of their lives, for the shipwreck of everything which they made." These lives are set forth as beacon-lights, "to warn us off from perilous reefs and quicksands, which have been the destruction of many, and which might only too easily be ours." The John Bull says, "they are, like all he writes, affectionate and earnest discourses."

SERMONS Preached for the most part in Ireland. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

This volume consists of Thirty-two Sermons, the greater part of which were preached in Ireland; the subjects are as follows:—Jacob, a Prince with God and with Men—Agrippa—The Woman that was a Sinner—Secret Faults—The Seven Worse Spirits—Freedom in the Truth—Joseph and his Brethren—Bearing one another's Burdens—Christ's Challenge to the World—The Love of Money—The Salt of the Earth—The Armour of God—Light in the Lord—The Failer of Philippi—The Thorn in the Flesh—Isaiah's Vision—Selfishness—Abraham interceding for Sodom—Vain Thoughts—Pontius Pilate—The Brazen Serpent—The Death and Burial of Moses—A Word from the Cross—The Church's Worship in the Beauty of Holiness—Every Good Gift from Above—On the Hearing of Prayer—The Kingdom which cometh not with Observation—Pressing towards the Mark—Saul—The Good Shepherd—The Valley of Dry Bones—All Saints.

Tudor.—The DECALOGUE VIEWED as the CHRISTIAN'S LAW. With Special Reference to the Questions and Wants of the Times. By the Rev. RICH. TUDOR, B.A. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The author's aim is to bring out the Christian sense of the Decalogue in its application to existing needs and questions. The work will be found to occupy ground which no other single work has hitherto filled. It is divided into Two Parts, the First Part consisting of three lectures on "Duty," and the Second Part of twelve lectures on the Ten Commandments. The Guardian says of it, "His volume throughout is an outspoken and sound exposition of Christian morality, based deeply upon true foundations, set forth systematically, and forcibly and plainly expressed—as good a specimen of what pulpit lectures ought to be as is often to be found."

Tulloch.—THE CHRIST OF THE GOSPELS AND THE CHRIST OF MODERN CRITICISM. Lectures on M. RENAN'S "Vie de Jésus." By JOHN TULLOCH, D.D., Principal of the College of St. Mary, in the University of St. Andrew's. Extra fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

While Dr. Tulloch does not hesitate to grapple boldly with the statements and theories of Renan, he does so in a spirit of perfect fairness and courtesy, eschewing all personalities and sinister insinuations as to motives and sincerity. The work will be found to be a fair and full statement, in Dr. Tulloch's eloquent style, of the case as it stands against Renan's theory.

Vaughan.—Works by CHARLES J. VAUGHAN, D.D., Master of the Temple:—

Dr. Vaughan's genuine sympathy with the difficulties, sorrows and struggles of all classes of his fellow-men, his thorough disinterestedness, and his high views of life have been acknowledged by critics of all creeds. No sermons can be more applicable to the ever-recurring ills, bodily, mental, and spiritual, that flesh is heir to. His commentaries and expository lectures are those of a faithful evangelical, but at the same time liberal-minded interpreter of what he believes to be the Word of God.

CHRIST SATISFYING THE INSTINCTS OF HUMANITY. Eight Lectures delivered in the Temple Church. Extra fcp. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The object of these Sermons is to exhibit the spiritual wants of human nature, and to prove that all of them receive full satisfaction in Christ. The various instincts which He is shewn to meet are those of Truth, Reverence, Perfection, Liberty, Courage, Sympathy, Sacrifice, and Unity. "We are convinced that there are congregations, in number unmistakeably increasing, to whom such Essays as these, full of thought and learning, are infinitely more beneficial, for they are more acceptable, than the recognised type of sermons."

MEMORIALS OF HARROW SUNDAYS. A Selection of Sermons preached in Harrow School Chapel. With a View of the Chapel. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

While these Sermons deal with subjects that in a peculiar way concern the young, and in a manner that cannot fail to attract their attention and influence their conduct, they are in every respect applicable to people of all ages. "Discussing," says the John Bull, "those forms of evil and impediments to duty which peculiarly beset the young, Dr. Vaughan has, with singular tact, blended deep thought and analytical investigation of principles with interesting earnestness and eloquent simplicity." The Nonconformist says "the volume is a precious one for family reading, and for the hand of the thoughtful boy or young man entering life."

THE BOOK AND THE LIFE, and other Sermons, preached before the University of Cambridge. New Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

These Sermons are all of a thoroughly practical nature, and some of them are especially adapted to those who are in a state of anxious doubt. "They meet," the Freeman says, "in what appears to us to be the one true method, the scepticism and indifference to religious truth which are almost sure to trouble young men who read and think. In short, we know no book more likely to do the young and inquiring good, or to help them to gain that tone of mind wanting which they may doubt and ask for ever, because always doubting and asking in vain."

TWELVE DISCOURSES ON SUBJECTS CONNECTED WITH THE LITURGY AND WORSHIP of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND. Fcap. 8vo. 6s.

Four of these discourses were published in 1860, in a work entitled Revision of the Liturgy; four others have appeared in the form of separate sermons, delivered on various occasions, and published at the time by request; and four are new. All will be found to fall strictly under the present title, reviewing the chief matters suggested by the Church Liturgy. The Appendix contains two articles,—one on "Subscription and Scruples," the other on the "Rubric and the Burial Service." The Press characterises the volume as "eminently wise and temperate."

LESSONS OF LIFE AND GODLINESS. A Selection of Sermons preached in the Parish Church of Doncaster. Fourth and Cheaper Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

This volume consists of Nineteen Sermons, mostly on subjects connected with the every-day walk and conversation of Christians. They bear such titles as "The Talebearer," "Features of Charity," "The Danger of Relapse," "The Secret Life and the Outward," "Family Prayer," "Zeal without Consistency," "The Gospel an Incentive to Industry in Business," "Use and Abuse of the World." The Spectator styles them "earnest and human. They are adapted to every class and order in the social system, and will be read with wakeful interest by all who seek to amend whatever may be amiss in their natural disposition or in their acquired habits."

WORDS FROM THE GOSPELS. A Second Selection of Sermons preached in the Parish Church of Doncaster. Second Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

In this volume are Twenty-two Sermons on subjects taken from one or other of the four Gospels. The Nonconformist characterises these Sermons as "of practical earnestness, of a thoughtfulness that penetrates the common conditions and experiences of life, and brings the truths and examples of Scripture to bear on them with singular force, and of a style that owes its real elegance to the simplicity and directness which have fine culture for their roots. . . . A book than which few could give more holy pleasantness and solemn purpose to their Sabbath evenings at home."

LESSONS OF THE CROSS AND PASSION. Six Lectures delivered in Hereford Cathedral during the Week before Easter, 1869. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

*This volume contains Six Sermons on subjects mainly connected with the death and passion of Christ. The titles of the Sermons are:—*I. "Too Late" (Matt. xxvi. 45). II. "The Divine Sacrifice and the Human Priesthood." III. "Love not the World." IV. "The Moral Glory of Christ." V. "Christ made perfect through Suffering." VI. "Death the Remedy of Christ's Loneliness." "This little volume," the Nonconformist says, "exhibits all his best characteristics. Elevated, calm, and clear, the Sermons owe much to their force, and yet they seem literally to owe nothing to it. They are studied, but their grace is the grace of perfect simplicity."

LIFE'S WORK AND GOD'S DISCIPLINE. Three Sermons. Fcap. 8vo. cloth. 2s. 6d.

*The Three Sermons contained in this volume have a oneness of aim indicated by the title, and are on the following subjects:—*I. "The Work burned and the Workmen saved." II. "The Individual Hiring." III. "The Remedial Discipline of Disease and Death."

THE WHOLESOME WORDS OF JESUS CHRIST. Four Sermons preached before the University of Cambridge in November 1866. Second Edition. Fcap. 8vo. cloth. 3s. 6d.

*Dr. Vaughan uses the word "Wholesome" here in its literal and original sense, the sense in which St. Paul uses it, as meaning healthy, sound, conducing to right living; and in these Sermons he points out and illustrates several of the "wholesome" characteristics of the Gospel,—the Words of Christ. The subjects of these Sermons are as follow:—*I. "Naturalness and Spirituality of Revelation—Grandeur and Self-Control—Truthfulness and Tenderness." II. "Universality and Individuality of Christ's Gospel." III. "Oblivions and Ambitions of the Life of Grace." IV. "Regrets and Preparations of Human Life." The John Bull says this volume is "replete with all the author's well-known vigour of thought and richness of expression."

FOES OF FAITH. Sermons preached before the University of Cambridge in November 1868. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The "Foes of Faith" preached against in these Four Sermons are:— I. "Unreality." II. "Indolence." III. "Irreverence." IV. "Inconsistency,"—"Foes," says the author, "which must be manfully fought against by all who would be finally admitted into that holy communion and fellowship which is, for time and eternity, the blessed company of all faithful people." "They are written," the London Review says, "with culture and elegance, and exhibit the thoughtful earnestness, piety, and good sense of their author."

LECTURES ON THE EPISTLE to the PHILIPPIANS.

Third and Cheaper Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 5s.

Each Lecture is prefaced by a literal translation from the Greek of the paragraph which forms its subject, contains first a minute explanation of the passage on which it is based, and then a practical application of the verse or clause selected as its text. The Press speaks of these Lectures thus:—"Replete with good sense and practical religious advice... The language of the Apostle assumes a practical significance, which it seldom wears in the eyes of any ordinary reader, and Dr. Vaughan's listeners would feel themselves placed in the position of men receiving inspired instruction on the ordinary business of life. We can scarcely praise this plan too highly."

LECTURES ON THE REVELATION OF ST. JOHN.

Third and Cheaper Edition. Two Vols. Extra fcap. 8vo. 9s.

In this the Third Edition of these Lectures, the literal translations of the passages expounded will be found interwoven in the body of the Lectures themselves. In attempting to expound this most-hard-to-understand Book, Dr. Vaughan, while taking from others what assistance he required, has not adhered to any particular school of interpretation, but has endeavoured to shew forth the significance of this Revelation by the help of his strong common sense, critical acumen, scholarship, and reverent spirit. "Dr. Vaughan's Sermons," the Spectator says, "are the most practical discourses on the Apocalypse with which we are acquainted." Prefixed is a Synopsis of the Book of Revelation, and appended is an Index of passages illustrating the language of the Book.

EPIPHANY, LENT, AND EASTER. A Selection of Expository Sermons. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The first eighteen of these Sermons were preached during the seasons of 1860, indicated in the title, and are practical expositions of passages taken from the lessons of the days on which they were delivered. The last eight Sermons were added to the Second Edition. As in the case of the Lectures on Philippians, each Lecture is prefaced with a careful and literal rendering of the original of the passage of which the Lecture is an exposition. The Nonconformist says that "in simplicity, dignity, close adherence to the words of Scripture, insight into 'the mind of the Spirit,' and practical thoughtfulness, they are models of that species of pulpit instruction to which they belong."

THE EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL. For English Readers.

PART I., containing the FIRST EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS. Second Edition. 8vo. 1s. 6d. Each Epistle will be published separately in its chronological order.

It is the object of this work to enable English readers, unacquainted with Greek, to enter with intelligence into the meaning, connection, and phraseology of the writings of the great Apostle. (1) Each Epistle will be prefaced by an Introduction containing information as to the circumstances, design, and order of its composition. (2) The Authorized English Version occupies the foremost place in each page. (3) Beside it, in smaller type, is a literal English Version, made from the original Greek. (4) A free paraphrase stands below, in which it is attempted to express the sense and connection of the Epistle. (5) The Notes include both doctrinal explanation and verbal illustration; occasionally a brief word of application has been introduced.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS. The Greek Text, with English Notes. Third Edition, greatly enlarged. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

This volume contains the Greek Text of the Epistle to the Romans as settled by the Rev. B. F. Westcott, D.D., for his complete recension of the Text of the New Testament. Appended to the text are copious critical and exegetical Notes, the result, of almost eighteen years' study on the part of the author. The "Index of Words illustrated or explained in the Notes" will be found, in some considerable degree, an Index to the Epistles as a whole. "I have desired," the author says, "to catch and to represent the meaning of each passage and of the whole, without deriving it from any secondary source. One of my principal endeavours has been, to trace through the New Testament the uses of the more remarkable words or phrases which occur in the Epistle, arranging them, where the case required it, under their various modifications of sense." Prefixed to the volume is a discourse on "St. Paul's Conversion and Doctrine," suggested by some recent publications on St. Paul's theological standing. In the Preface to the Third Edition, which has been almost entirely rewritten, among other things, is a Synopsis of the contents of the Epistle. The Guardian says of the work,—
"For educated young men his commentary seems to fill a gap hitherto unfilled. . . As a whole, Dr. Vaughan appears to us to have given to the world a valuable book of original and careful and earnest thought bestowed on the accomplishment of a work which will be of much service and which is much needed."

THE CHURCH OF THE FIRST DAYS.

- Series I. The Church of Jerusalem. Third Edition.
 " II. The Church of the Gentiles. Second Edition.
 " III. The Church of the World. Second Edition.
 Fcap. 8vo. cloth. 4s. 6d. each.

The work is in three volumes:—I. "The Church of Jerusalem," extending from the 1st to the 8th chapter (inclusive) of the Acts. II. "The Church of the Gentiles," from the 9th to the 16th chapter. III. "The Church of the World," from the 17th to the 28th chapter. Where necessary, the Authorized Version has been departed from, and a new literal translation taken as the basis of exposition. All possible topographical and historical light has been brought to bear on the subject; and while thoroughly practical in their aim, these Lectures will be found to afford a fair notion of the history and condition of the Primitive Church. The British Quarterly says,—“These Sermons are worthy of all praise, and are models of pulpit teaching.”

COUNSELS for YOUNG STUDENTS. Three Sermons preached before the University of Cambridge at the Opening of the Academical Year 1870-71. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

The titles of the Three Sermons contained in this volume are:—I. “The Great Decision.” II. “The House and the Builder.” III. “The Prayer and the Counter-Prayer.” They all bear pointedly, earnestly, and sympathisingly upon the conduct and pursuits of young students and young men generally, to counsel whom, Dr. Vaughan’s qualifications and aptitude are well known.

NOTES FOR LECTURES ON CONFIRMATION, with suitable Prayers. Eighth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 1s. 6d.

In preparation for the Confirmation held in Harrow School Chapel, Dr. Vaughan was in the habit of printing week by week, and distributing among the Candidates, somewhat full notes of the Lecture he purposed to deliver to them, together with a form of Prayer adapted to the particular subject. He has collected these weekly Notes and Prayers into this little volume, in the hope that it may assist the labours of those who are engaged in preparing Candidates for Confirmation, and who find it difficult to lay their hand upon any one book of suitable instruction. The Press says the work “commends itself at once by its simplicity and by its logical arrangement. . . . While points of doctrine, as they arise, are not lost sight of, the principal stress is laid on the preparation of the heart rather than the head.”

THE TWO GREAT TEMPTATIONS. The Temptation of Man, and the Temptation of Christ. Lectures delivered in the Temple Church, Lent 1872. Extra fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Vaughan.—Works by DAVID J. VAUGHAN, M.A., Vicar of St. Martin's, Leicester :—

SERMONS PREACHED IN ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, LEICESTER, during the Years 1855 and 1856. Crown 8vo. 5s. 6d.

These Twenty-five Sermons embrace a great variety of topics, all of the highest interest, are thoroughly practical in their nature, and calculated to give a hopeful view of life as seen in the light shed upon it by Christianity.

CHRISTIAN EVIDENCES AND THE BIBLE. New Edition, revised and enlarged. Fcap. 8vo. cloth. 5s. 6d.

The main object of this series of Twelve Sermons is to shew, that, quite irrespective of any theory as to the nature of the Bible and the special inspiration of its authors, there is good and sufficient reason for believing that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, who reveals and reconciles men to the Father. "This little volume," the Spectator says, "is a model of that honest and reverent criticism of the Bible which is not only right, but the duty of English clergymen in such times as these to put forth from the pulpit."

Venn.—ON SOME OF THE CHARACTERISTICS OF BELIEF, Scientific and Religious. Being the Hulsean Lectures for 1869. By the Rev. J. VENN, M.A. 8vo. 6s. 6d.

These discourses are intended to illustrate, explain, and work out into some of their consequences, certain characteristics by which the attainment of religious belief is prominently distinguished from the attainment of belief upon most other subjects.

Warrington.—THE WEEK OF CREATION; OR, THE COSMOGONY OF GENESIS CONSIDERED IN ITS RELATION TO MODERN SCIENCE. By GEORGE WARRINGTON, Author of "The Historic Character of the Pentateuch Vindicated." Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

The greater part of this work is taken up with the teaching of the Cosmogony. Its purpose is also investigated, and a chapter is devoted to the consideration of the passage in which the difficulties occur. "A very able vindication of the Mosaic Cosmogony by a writer who unites the advantages of a critical knowledge of the Hebrew text and of distinguished scientific attainments."—Spectator.

Westcott.—Works by BROOKE FOSS WESTCOTT, D.D., Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge;
Canon of Peterborough:—

The London Quarterly, speaking of Mr. Westcott, says,—“To a learning and accuracy which command respect and confidence, he unites what are not always to be found in union with these qualities, the no less valuable faculties of lucid arrangement and graceful and facile expression.”

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF THE GOSPELS. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The author's chief object in this work has been to shew that there is a true mean between the idea of a formal harmonization of the Gospels and the abandonment of their absolute truth. After an Introduction on the General Effects of the course of Modern Philosophy on the popular views of Christianity, he proceeds to determine in what way the principles therein indicated may be applied to the study of the Gospels. The treatise is divided into eight Chapters:—I. The Preparation for the Gospel. II. The Jewish Doctrine of the Messiah. III. The Origin of the Gospels. IV. The Characteristics of the Gospels. V. The Gospel of St. John. VI. and VII. The Differences in detail and of arrangement in the Synoptic Evangelists. VIII. The Difficulties of the Gospels. The Appendices contain much valuable subsidiary matter.

A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE HISTORY OF THE CANON OF THE NEW TESTAMENT DURING THE
FIRST FOUR CENTURIES. Third Edition, revised. Crown
8vo. 10s. 6d.

The object of this treatise is to deal with the New Testament as a whole, and that on purely historical grounds. The separate books of which it is composed are considered not individually, but as claiming to be parts of the apostolic heritage of Christians. The Author has thus endeavoured to connect the history of the New Testament Canon with the growth and consolidation of the Catholic Church, and to point out the relation existing between the amount of evidence for the authenticity of its component parts and the whole mass of Christian literature. "The treatise," says the British Quarterly, "is a scholarly performance, learned, dispassionate, discriminating, worthy of his subject and of the present state of Christian literature in relation to it."

THE BIBLE IN THE CHURCH. A Popular Account of the Collection and Reception of the Holy Scriptures in the Christian Churches. Third Edition. 18mo. 4s. 6d.

The present volume has been written under the impression that a History of the whole Bible, and not of the New Testament only, would be required, if those unfamiliar with the subject were to be enabled to learn in what manner and with what consent the collection of Holy Scriptures was first made and then enlarged and finally closed by the Church. Though the work is intended to be simple and popular in its method, the author, for this very reason, has aimed at the strictest accuracy. The History of the Bible is brought down to the 16th century, and the Appendix contains two articles,—I. "On the History of the Canon of the Old Testament before the Christian Era." II. "On the Contents of the most ancient MSS. of the Christian Bible." The Literary Churchman says, "Mr. Westcott's account of the 'Canon' is true history in the very highest sense."

A GENERAL VIEW OF THE HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH BIBLE. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

In the Introduction the author notices briefly the earliest vernacular versions of the Bible, especially those in Anglo-Saxon. Chapter I. is occupied with an account of the Manuscript English Bible from the 14th century downwards; and in Chapter II. is narrated, with many interesting personal and other details, the External History of the Printed Bible. In Chapter III. is set forth the Internal History of the English Bible, shewing to what extent the various English Translations were independent, and to what extent the translators were indebted to earlier English and foreign versions. In the Appendices, among other interesting and valuable matter, will be found "Specimens of the Earlier and Later Wycliffite Versions;" "Chronological List of Bibles;" "An Examination of Mr. Froude's History of the English Bible." The Pall Mall Gazette calls the work "A brief, scholarly, and, to a great extent, an original contribution to theological literature."

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE, MANIFOLD AND ONE.

Six Sermons preached in Peterborough Cathedral. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

The Six Sermons contained in this volume are the first preached by the author as a Canon of Peterborough Cathedral. The subjects are:—I. "Life consecrated by the Ascension." II. "Many Gifts, One Spirit." III. "The Gospel of the Resurrection." IV. "Sufficiency of God." V. "Action the Test of Faith." VI. "Progress from the Confession of God." The Nonconformist calls them "Beautiful discourses, singularly devout and tender."

THE GOSPEL OF THE RESURRECTION. Thoughts

on its Relation to Reason and History. New Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

The present Essay is an endeavour to consider some of the elementary truths of Christianity, as a miraculous Revelation, from the side of History and Reason. The author endeavours to shew that a devout belief in the Life of Christ is quite compatible with a broad view of the course of human progress and a frank trust in the laws of our own minds. After a "Statement of the Question," and an Introduction on "Ideas of God, Nature, Miracles," Chapter I. treats of "The Resurrection and History;" Chapter II. "The Resurrection and Man;" Chapter III. "The Resurrection and the Church."—"We owe," the Patriot says, "Mr. Westcott a very

Yonge (Charlotte M.)—SCRIPTURE READINGS for SCHOOLS AND FAMILIES. By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, Author of "The Heir of Redclyffe." Globe 8vo. 1s. 6d. With Comments. 3s. 6d.

A SECOND SERIES. From Joshua to Solomon. Extra fcap. 8vo. 1s. 6d. With Comments. 3s. 6d.

Actual need has led the author to endeavour to prepare a reading book convenient for study with children, containing the very words of the Bible, with only a few expedient omissions, and arranged in Lessons of such length as by experience she has found to suit with children's ordinary power of accurate attentive interest. The verse form has been retained because of its convenience for children reading in class, and as more resembling their Bibles; but the poetical portions have been given in their lines. When Psalms or portions from the Prophets illustrate or fall in with the narrative, they are given in their chronological sequence. The Scripture portion, with a very few notes explanatory of mere words, is bound up apart to be used by children, while the same is also supplied with a brief comment, the purpose of which is either to assist the teacher in explaining the lesson, or to be used by more advanced young people to whom it may not be possible to give access to the authorities whence it has been taken. Professor Huxley at a meeting of the London School-board, particularly mentioned the Selection made by Miss Yonge, as an example of how selections might be made for School reading. "Her Comments are models of their kind."—Literary Churchman.

MACMILLAN'S SUNDAY LIBRARY.

A SERIES OF ORIGINAL WORKS BY EMINENT AUTHORS.

The Guardian says—"All Christian households owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Macmillan for that useful 'Sunday Library.'"

THE FOLLOWING VOLUMES ARE NOW READY:—

The Pupils of St. John the Divine.—By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, Author of "The Heir of Redclyffe."

The author first gives a full sketch of the life and work of the Apostle himself, drawing the material from all the most trustworthy authorities, sacred and profane; then follow the lives of his immediate disciples, Ignatius, Quadratus, Polycarp, and others; which are succeeded by the lives of many of their pupils. She then proceeds to sketch from their foundation the history of the many churches planted or superintended by St. John and his pupils, both in the East and West. In the last chapter is given an account of the present aspect of the Churches of St. John,—the Seven Churches of Asia mentioned in Revelations; also those of Athens, of Nîmes, of Lyons, and others in the West. "Young and old will be equally refreshed and taught by these pages, in which nothing is dull, and nothing is far-fetched."—Churchman.

The Hermits.—By CANON KINGSLEY.

The volume contains the lives of some of the most remarkable early Egyptian, Syrian, Persian, and Western hermits. The lives are mostly translations from the original biographies; "the reader will thus be able to see the men as wholes, to judge of their merits and defects."—"It is from first to last a production full of interest, written with a liberal appreciation of what is memorable for good in the lives of the Hermits, and with a wise forbearance towards legends which may be due to the ignorance, and, no doubt, also to the strong faith of the early chroniclers."—London Review.

Seekers after God.—By the Rev. F. W. FARRAR, M.A., F.R.S., Head Master of Marlborough College.

In this volume the author seeks to record the lives, and gives copious samples of the almost Christ-like utterances of, with perhaps the exception of Socrates, "the best and holiest characters presented to us in the records of antiquity." They are Seneca, Epictetus, and Marcus Aurelius, most appropriately called "Seekers after God," seeing that "amid infinite difficulties and surrounded by a corrupt society, they devoted themselves to the earnest search after those truths which might best make their lives 'beautiful before God.'" The volume contains portraits of Aurelius, Seneca, and Antoninus Pius. "We can heartily recommend it as healthy in tone, instructive, interesting, mentally and spiritually stimulating and nutritious."—Nonconformist.

England's Antiphon.—By GEORGE MACDONALD.

This volume deals chiefly with the lyric or song-form of English religious poetry, other kinds, however, being not infrequently introduced. The author has sought to trace the course of our religious poetry from the 13th to the 19th centuries, from before Chaucer to Tennyson. He endeavours to accomplish his object by selecting the men who have produced the finest religious poetry, setting forth the circumstances in which they were placed, characterising the men themselves, critically estimating their productions, and giving ample specimens of their best religious lyrics, and quotations from larger poems, illustrating the religious feeling of the poets or their times. "Dr. Macdonald has very successfully endeavoured to bring together in his little book a whole series of the sweet singers of England, and makes them raise, one after the other, their voices in praise of God."—Guardian.

Great Christians of France: ST. LOUIS and CALVIN.

By M. GUIZOT.

From among French Catholics, M. Guizot has, in this volume, selected Louis, King of France in the 13th century, and among Protestants, Calvin the Reformer in the 16th century, "as two earnest and illustrious representatives of the Christian faith and life, as well as of the loftiest thought and purest morality of their country and generation." In setting forth with considerable fulness the lives of these prominent and representative Christian men, M. Guizot necessarily introduces much of the political and religious history of the periods during which they lived. "A very interesting book," says the Guardian.

Christian Singers of Germany.—By CATHERINE WINKWORTH.

In this volume the authoress gives an account of the principal hymn-writers of Germany from the 9th to the 19th century, introducing ample (altogether about 120 translations) specimens from their best productions. In the translations, while the English is perfectly idiomatic and harmonious, the characteristic differences of the poems have been carefully imitated, and the general style and metre retained. The book is divided into chapters, the writers noticed and the hymns quoted in each chapter, being representative of an epoch in the religious life of Germany. In thus tracing the course of German hymnology, the authoress is necessarily "brought into contact with those great movements which have stirred the life of the people."—"Miss Winkworth's volume of this series is, according to our view, the choicest production of her pen."—British Quarterly Review.

Apostles of Mediæval Europe.—By the Rev. G. F. MACLEAR, D.D., Head Master of King's College School, London.

In two Introductory Chapters the author notices some of the chief characteristics of the mediæval period itself; gives a graphic sketch of the devastated state of Europe at the beginning of that period, and an interesting account of the religions of the three great groups of vigorous barbarians—the Celts, the Teutons, and the Slaves—who had, wave after wave, overflowed its surface. He then proceeds to sketch the lives and work of the chief of the courageous men who devoted themselves to the stupendous task of their conversion and civilization, during a period extending from the 5th to the 13th century; such as St. Patrick, St. Columba, St. Columbanus, St. Augustine of Canterbury, St. Boniface, St. Olaf, St. Cyril, Raymond Sull, and others. In narrating the lives of these men, many glimpses are given into the political, social, and religious life of Europe during the Middle Ages, and many interesting and instructive incidents are introduced. "Mr. Maclear will have done a great work if his admirable little volume shall help to break up the dense ignorance which is still prevailing among people at large."—Literary Churchman.

Alfred the Great.—By THOMAS HUGHES, M.P., Author of "Tom Brown's School Days." Third Edition.

"The time is come when we English can no longer stand by as interested spectators only, but in which every one of our institutions will be sifted with rigour, and will have to shew cause for its existence. . . . As a help in this search, this life of the typical English King is here offered." After two Introductory Chapters, one on Kings and Kingship, and another depicting the condition of Wessex when Alfred became its ruler, the author proceeds to set forth the life and work of this great prince, shewing how he conducted himself in all the relations of life. In the last chapter the author shews the bearing which Christianity has on the kingship and government of the nations and people of the world in which we live. Besides other illustrations in the volume, a Map of England is prefixed, shewing its divisions about 1000 A.D., as well as at the present time. "Mr. Hughes has indeed written a good book, bright and readable we need hardly say, and of a very considerable historical value."—Spectator.

Nations Around.—By Miss A. KEARY.

This volume contains many details concerning the social and political life, the religion, the superstitions, the literature, the architecture, the commerce, the industry, of the Nations around Palestine, an acquaintance with which is necessary in order to a clear and full understanding of the history of the Hebrew people. The authoress has brought to her aid all the most recent investigations into the early history of these nations, referring frequently to the fruitful excavations which have brought to light the ruins and hieroglyphic writings of many of their buried cities. "Miss Keary has skilfully availed herself of the opportunity to write a pleasing and instructive book."—Guardian. "A valuable and interesting volume."—Illustrated Times.

St. Anselm.—By the Very Rev. R. W. CHURCH, M.A., Dean of St. Paul's. Second Edition.

In this biography of St. Anselm, while the story of his life as a man, a Christian, a clergyman, and a politician, is told impartially and fully, much light is shed on the ecclesiastical and political history of the time during which he lived, and on the internal economy of the monastic establishments of the period. Of the worthiness of St. Anselm to have his life recorded, Mr. Church says, "It would not be easy to find one who so joined the largeness and daring of a powerful and inquiring intellect, with the graces and sweetness and unselfishness of the most loveable of friends, and with the fortitude, clear-sightedness, and dauntless firmness of a hero, forced into a hero's career in spite of himself." The author has drawn his materials from contemporary biographers and chroniclers, while at the same time he has consulted the best recent authors who have treated of the man and his time. "It is a sketch by the hand of a master, with every line marked by taste, learning, and real apprehension of the subject."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Francis of Assisi.—By Mrs. OLIPHANT.

The life of this saint, the founder of the Franciscan order, and one of the most remarkable men of his time, illustrates some of the chief characteristics of the religious life of the Middle Ages. Much information is given concerning the missionary labours of the saint and his companions, as well as concerning the religious and monastic life of the time. Many graphic details are introduced from the saint's contemporary biographers, which shew forth the prevalent beliefs of the period; and abundant samples are given of St. Francis's own sayings, as well as a few specimens of his simple tender hymns. "We are grateful to Mrs. Oliphant for a book of much interest and pathetic beauty, a book which none can read without being the better for it."—John Bull.

Pioneers and Founders; or, Recent Workers in the Mission Field. By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, Author of "The Heir of Redclyffe." With Frontispiece, and Vignette Portrait of BISHOP HEBER.

The author has endeavoured in these narratives to bring together such of the more distinguished Missionaries of the English and American Nations as might best illustrate the character and growth of Mission-work in the last two centuries. The object has been to throw together such biographies as are most complete, most illustrative, and have been found most inciting to stir up others—representative lives, as far as possible. The missionaries whose biographies are here given, are—John Eliot, the Apostle of the Red Indians; David Brainerd, the Enthusiast; Christian F. Schwartz, the Councillor of Tanjore; Henry Martyn, the Scholar-Missionary; William Carey and Joshua Marshman, the Serampore Missionaries; the Judson Family; the Bishops of Calcutta,—Thomas Middleton, Reginald Heber, Daniel Wilson; Samuel Marsden, the Australian Chaplain and Friend of the Maori; John Williams, the Martyr of Erromango; Allen Gardener, the Sailor Martyr; Charles Frederick Mackenzie, the Martyr of Zambesi. "Likely to be one of the most popular of the 'Sunday Library' volumes."—Literary Churchman.

Angelique Arnauld, Abbess of Port Royal. By

FRANCES MARTIN. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

This new volume of the 'Sunday Library' contains the life of a very remarkable woman founded on the best authorities. She was a Roman Catholic Abbess who lived more than 200 years ago, whose life contained much struggle and suffering. But if we look beneath the surface, we find that sublime virtues are associated with her errors, there is something admirable in everything she does, and the study of her history leads to a continual enlargement of our own range of thought and sympathy. It is believed the volume is not surpassed in interest by any other belonging to this well-known series.

THE "BOOK OF PRAISE" HYMNAL,

COMPILED AND ARRANGED BY

SIR ROUNDELL PALMER,

In the following four forms :—

A. Beautifully printed in Royal 32mo., limp cloth, price 6d.

B. „ „ Small 18mo., larger type, cloth limp, 1s.

C. Same edition on fine paper, cloth, 1s. 6d.

Also an edition with Music, selected, harmonized, and composed by JOHN HULLAH, in square 18mo., cloth, 3s. 6d.

The large acceptance which has been given to "The Book of Praise" by all classes of Christian people encourages the Publishers in entertaining the hope that this Hymnal, which is mainly selected from it, may be extensively used in Congregations, and in some degree at least meet the desires of those who seek uniformity in common worship as a means towards that unity which pious souls yearn after, and which our Lord prayed for in behalf of his Church. "The office of a hymn is not to teach controversial Theology, but to give the voice of song to practical religion. No doubt, to do this, it must embody sound doctrine; but it ought to do so, not after the manner of the schools, but with the breadth, freedom, and simplicity of the Fountain-head." On this principle has Sir R. Palmer proceeded in the preparation of this book.

The arrangement adopted is the following :—

PART I. consists of Hymns arranged according to the subjects of the Creed—"God the Creator," "Christ Incarnate," "Christ Crucified," "Christ Risen," "Christ Ascended," "Christ's Kingdom and Judgment," etc.

PART II. comprises Hymns arranged according to the subjects of the Lord's Prayer.

PART III. Hymns for natural and sacred seasons.

There are 320 Hymns in all.
